The developments of the day were on the whole of an unsettling character. Weather reports from the Northwest were the worst received for some time. They were accompanied with predictions that the storm would tend toward the corn belt, and would be followed by colder weather. There was continued weakness in the Steel stocks.

Brooklyn Rapid Transit declined on light transactions, and the bank statement was transactions, and the bank statement was of a distinctly discouraging nature. Final quotations were the lowest of the day.

Often when the doctor comes home late of a winter night after a long, hard drive he will take a "Yew light refreshments" before retiring in the shape of a four-pound steak, hfty-six hard boiled ed eggs, three and one-half pumpkin pies, and a gallon of milk, and we have it as the direct estimony of a personal friend that Dr. Bonner never had the nightmare in his life.

Often when the doctor comes home late of a winter night after a long, hard out of him, ian over to the night clerk to give the alarm. He had never heard of chimney sweeping at midnight and of chimney sweeping at midnight and could scarcely be persuaded things were all right. He made such a row that the clerk took him up on the roof at last, friend that Dr. Bonner never had the nightmare in his life.
