Active Dollars Keep the Wheels Moving

Fifty or a hundred dollars hoarded away in your closet or locked drawer is just itself, and the world is deprived of its usefulness while you hold it. See what it can do when put in motion.

The store's financier figures his daily cash returns growing, and takes down additional discounts by paying today bills due next month. The manufacturer figures: I'll pass that on and make a discount on a bill, and so on, and in 24 hours one hundred dollars does three hundred dollars' worth of business.

Multiply the hundreds in one concern's receipts-see the wheels hum.

Even a moderate day's business at this store can do many hundreds of dollars worth of the country's business. No vigorous business hoards its funds-their quick use means extra profit, and quick profits are the object of businesses nowadays when not profits are small.

These comparisons serve only to illustrate the benefits accruing from business conducted on strictly cash methods (from the manufacturer right down to the consumer), the policy pursued by this store for over fifteen years, and you have watched it grow.
