GOVERNOR KENNE

Before this reaches the eye of Governor Kennedy will have prob ed, and will in due course receive from the inhabitants. If we erect like the citizens of Rome at Casa "put on our best attire, cull out and strew flowers in his way," it the Roman citizens, to pander to of a conqueror, but to show a mark to the representative of Her and to offer a reception to man of whom much is expe-have had our season of grun discontent; but with the dawn o future, we have buried the hatch cepted the calumet. We have gi well demonstration to the retiring and now, in the same spirit of c extend a warm and genuine weld successor. An auspicious period is openin by, and an opportunity is afford cellency to become one of the of governors. He commences his Island career with a tabula rasapages of his official book are clear lied—no prejudicial connections his policy, no injurious interests tween him and the people's we quainted with the working of free in the Australian dependencies, h us with a proper conception of whi a political sense, to the enterprisi tion of a British colony. Had we governor from England, destitute experience, we should, in all proba had a man wedded inseparably to customs unsuited to the exigence more progressive communities countries. As it is, however, we h to be gratified at obtaining a gent has seen something of the world comes to us free from that obstinat sufficiency which usually accomp experience.

As a people, we are too prone t the Executive some mysterious power, and expect from it the Hercules. So soon as Governo enters Yates street he is told to " resources," when he might with ju reason be asked to "build our I "till our soil." The fable of Jupi Waggoner is always in requisition are afraid that unless we have the self-reliance and intelligence to d own material resources we shall h poor chance of the labor being pe the representative of Her Maj position of a Governor of a Britis now well defined. The days of inte Executives have, in nearly all the happily ceased, and the wise G more than Queen Victoria attempt ere in the political affairs of the e aid and encourage the inhabitant laudable enterprise-to endeavor, where the population is large, to social reunions the ascerbities life-to give a tone to that societ he should be the ornament and the to look after the constitutionality of the Legislature, are really the taining to his office. In our form ment, a little wider latitude i course, to the Governor than in co ing the full measure of respons owing to the deficiency of intellect pendence in our Legislature hither ecutive has been allowed, in to stances, to supersede the functi V selepting to the North
