How the Finder of a Watch Chain was UNREWARDED .- A few days ago a young gentleman while walking down Fort-street lost a Japanese watch-chain with three gold coins attached. In the following day's Colonist appeared an advertisement promising to pay $20 if the finder would leave the missing article at this office; but no tidings were received until Friday evening, when a person who had observed an unknown man pick up the chain on Fort street, saw and recognized him on Government street. Information was conveyed to the Police; the man tracked to a cabin on Humboldt street, on Saturday, and, on being confronted with the officer, handed over the property, apologiza ing for not having returned it to the advertiser on the plea that he had no time. The party who conveyed the information received the reward, while the finder from "want of time" or dishonesty sacrificed both chain and reward.
