SLAVONIC PATRONYMICS.

The patronymics of the Slavonic races (-eff -evich, -ovich, -in, -ich) are too well known to need comment, but it is worth noting, as a curiosity, that the Little Russian or Ruthenian, has an ending of its own, -enko, as in the surnames Nikitenko, Yefimenko, son of Nocetas, son of Euthymus. Of the other na-tionalities under the dominion of Russia, the Georgian has two terminations. shvili and -dze, both meaning son.
"When the names become "Russified," says Thielmann, "the termination -chvill is generally changed into eff or off. An exception is found to this rule in the case of the Bagratidze, the most distinguished family in the land, which calls itself Begration." An instance of the change above referred to is the name of Ratieff, in Georgian Rathiesh-vihi; while as to Begration, I do not know its origin, but it reminds one of monotonous ending -ian, examples of which are common among the Armenian residents in London, Hagopian, (Jacobson), Krikorian, (son of Gregory), Findjandijan (son of the coffee-cup maker) .-

FULL COURT.

Several Appeals Disposed of at Yesterday's Sitting.

The Full court yesterday allowed a new trial in McGillivray v. Heinman, provided the casts of the trial below and of the appeal be paid within three months. Mr. L. P. Duff for defendant (appellant), Mr. W. H. Langley for plaintiff (respondent).

There were two appeals heard in E. & N. railway v. New Vancoucer Coal Co. Mr. E. V. Bodwell and A. P. Luxton for the E. & N., Mr. H. Dallas Helmcken, Q.C., and Mr. Gordon Hunter for the New Vancouver Coal Co. The first appeal was by plaintiff against an order of the design and the vision of the canadian expedition proposes to take advantage of a northern-tound current. His intention is to charter a good sealing steamer and proceed to the mouth of the Lena river, Siberia, and as much further to the north as possible, probably abandoning her in about 79 degrees east longitude. The party will consist of seven men, including two scientific observers and two Eskimos to take care of the dogs and reindeer. With every equipment that human ingenuity can devise he expects, at a minimum rate of four miles a day, to reach the pole, and within eighteen months to have completed his mission and reached Spitzbergen, in the other hemisphere. He hopes to be assisted thither from the pole by a southerly-bound current. From Spitzbergen he expects to return to civilization by a Norwegian excursion steamer.

As a precautionary measure they wears advantage of a northern-tound current of the Canadian expedition proposes to take advantage of a northern-tound current. This intention is to charter a good sealing steamer and p Spitzbergen he exepcts to return to civilist ization by a Norwegian excursion steamer.

As a precautionary measure the expedition will be provisioned for two years and a half. In his equipment there will be a unique boat, in compartments, built of aluminum and wood, with all the necessary appliances for whid and hand power, and so arranged that it will serve also as a house. There will be thirty sledges of to 2,000 pounds each, and also made of to elective to 2,000 pounds each, and also made of aluminum and wood, to fit into and form the bottom of a ruber raft. 25 feet long of 6 feet wide. 4 feet deep and capable of carrying 18,000 pounds. Six skeleton kayaks will foum part of the outfit, with covering detached, but ready for use in case of electhed, but ready for use in case of the regency. Each of these will be able to hold two men and six months' provisions, he and unhorned reindeer, to be utilized in carrying the provisions as far north as possible. They will be fed with 400 pounds of moss a day, and killed one by one to feed the dogs, of which there will be fifty or sixty, of the Siberian hound varlety.

H. Before going into winter quarters the balance of the reindeer will be killed to provide food for men and dogs.

Toronto, Jan. 12.—(Special)—An interseting libel suit came to its conclusion in the assize court this morning. Mrs. Beverley Robinson, of New York, formerly of Toronto, sued the Telegram for $25,000 damages for publishing a report to the effect that she had shot and killed her child and then committed suicide. It proved to be another lady named Mrs. Beverley Reason.

The Telegram corrected the mistake immediately and made an explicit retraction and apology. The verdict brought in this morning gave the plaintiff $1 damages instead of $25,000 asked.
