

Hatching Fish For Foreigners

Ottawa Reserves to Puget Sound Canneries First Choice of the Sockeyes.

Local Industry Thus Crippled and Millions Lost to Canadian Fishermen.

To the Editor of the Colonist: Sir: Two items have gone the rounds of the provincial press this week which seem to show very plainly the alleged dulness of wit and lack of business perception of our Britishers.

Our English cousins said he set us a mighty good example in the establishment of these hatcheries, and we old fishermen remark "since that it has been a great success."

There is something for the most drowsy of Her Majesty's subjects to ponder over. This estimable Yankee like we set him in maintaining hatcheries at our own expense to keep up the supply of salmon to the canneries.

I suppose everyone is aware that the Fraser river sockeye salmon referred to by Mr. Meyer are trapped on their way from the Straits to the Fraser river. Traps are placed at hundreds of different points along the west coast of Washington.

What Mr. Beaven or yourself, or "Vox Populi" policy that you may consider a progressive policy may not be considered by others anything but bad government.

Another convention should be called, when any difference of opinion as to platform and leadership can then and there be settled without the aid of outside agitators.

Now that the dates of production are drawing near, those in charge of the orchestral arrangements are devoting their attention to the score of the organization.

The rehearsals will be held as usual this week in the city hall, and the orchestra Tuesday, chorus and orchestra Thursday at 8 p.m.

CROW'S NEST COAL LANDS.

THE FIRST THING TO BE DONE WHEN ONE OF these big steamers arrives is to get the immigrants and their luggage on the wharf.

Prevention in this case is a hundred-fold—yes, a thousand fold, better than cure; and when one is able to write that.

As a reason for opposing the introduction of party lines into the forthcoming election, the above is assigned by Mr. Beaven as one of the causes for objecting to the Liberal-Conservative party.

THREE OF A KIND.

By N. de Bertrand Lurin. (Written for the Colonist.)

"Since, when we stand side by side Only hands may meet, Better half this weary world But farewell for aye."

The singer paused a moment, and while the pianist played a few soft bars of the melody, she raised her great eyes, and looked slowly, sadly, about her.

"I'll tell me each other claim, In a realm above." "A faint tremble crept into the last line, just enough to enhance its sweetness."

He saw a tear on her cheek as she turned, and—frowning it seemed to him—she looked at him with a stern, almost stern, expression.

He stood still and laughed a little under his breath, then took up his walk again. He was ten years or so older than she, but he never looked a day over thirty.

Jack closed his eyes. The roomful of gay people was forgotten. All the glancing lamps were gone. Instead there was the quiet moonlight of the old garden.

"Do," Jack answered, bringing his arm through the other's as they moved off towards the doors.

Neither of the men, though apparently so desirous of each other's company, seemed to have much to say, and in comparative silence they took their way along the verandah.

"Do," Jack answered, bringing his arm through the other's as they moved off towards the doors.

FORTY SECOND YEAR

The Prince Menace

Boy Anarchist at Brussels Two Shots at Prince of Wales.

His Royal Highness Trapped With Princess to Attend Birthday Party.

No Injury Sustained and Secured—Effect on Queen's Visit.

London, April 4.—The Prince of Wales started for Paris this morning for the purpose of attending the celebration of the Christian's birthday, which is April 8th.

Brussels, April 4.—The Prince of Wales was shot at as he was leaving the northern railroad, but the shots missed His Royal Highness.

The would-be assassin is a named Spido, a resident of Brussels, who is about 30 years of age.

Spido declared he intended to shoot the Prince of Wales, but he did not do so.

Intense excitement prevailed in Brussels, as it was feared that the Prince of Wales had been hit.

The Prince of Wales was not injured, and he returned to London without incident.

The police on duty took charge of the situation, and the Prince of Wales was escorted to his residence.

An examination of Spido's revolver showed that it was a cheap six-chambered revolver.

At the examination before the coroner, it was ascertained that Spido was a penniless man.

The Prince of Wales was not injured, and he returned to London without incident.

bound Asia are prevailed by the keener sentries of the police health—a long, rocky peninsula, striking fan-like into the blue waters of the gleaming Straits.

On closer acquaintance the promontory is found to be less forbidding and less "grown wild" than it appears.

There is a floating school for hospital use under extreme circumstances—indeed nothing seems to have been overlooked or unanticipated in the matter of preventive measures.

Passing from the fascinating disinfecting department with its baths for 300 Chinese, its formaldehyde process, its fumigation plant, its sterilizing chamber, and its convenient mail sorting room, one something seemed to strike his heart deeply. He heard, as in a dream, a low voice saying, "Good-bye, Jack, good-bye."

The hospital buildings occupy another portion of the grounds—scientifically complete in all their arrangements; and there is a reserve reservoir of fresh water on the highest point within the quarantine limits and a well furnished cheery home for first-class passengers in the parent, not only are the hospitals and disinfecting houses and depots of detention furnished and provisioned and ready for use at any moment, but there are flocks of sheep grazing in the nearby fields that could in a few hours be converted into mutton necessary to amply meet the needs of the station.

Some enterprising genius has recently laid out a 9-hole golf course on the grounds facing the passenger quarters, and it only remains for the park-like property contained in the quarantine reserve to be taken in hand with good game to be taken in hand with good game to be taken in hand with good game.

He started. His face grew hot. Blindly he rose to his feet, and with a vague sweet hope at his heart, swiftly left the room.
