The farmer is learning rapidly just why he should while being placed in position it was accidentally broken. there has been of late years a vast improvement in this property. The "Stick to the farm" text has been used for years in the sermons of thoughtful statesmen, who recognized the true worth of country property cognized the true worth of country property and knew that the increase of city population but created a demand for country produce that made the farmers' holdings more valuable; that text has borne fruit, as evidenced the farmers and the farmers are considered to the farmers are considered to the farmers and the farmers are considered to the farmers are considered able; that text has borne fruit, as evidenced by the census returns. The balance in the city and country account has been struck, and now a normal growth may be expected in both divisions. What is true of the United States we hope will prove true of Canada when the census of 1901 is gathered. The cities of the United States have robbed this country of its farming population to a much greater extent than have our own urban centres, but there is reason to believe urban centres, but there is reason to believe that this rush to the city has already been halted, and that the splendid farms of the finest agricultural country on earth will henceforth receive the attention they despect the control of the contro

Mr. Williams has a good reputation, having been physical instructor for Harvard college, Tufts college and Boston Y.M.C.A. -The death of Judge Johnston occurred at his home in Dartmouth yesterday morn-ing after a short illness. He was well known here, having spent many a summer vacation in town. He was in the 77th year of his age and had been on the Bench since 1876. Six other county court judges, of whom Judge Savary of Annapolis was one, were appointed at the same time, and four of the seven are now dead. It is said of Judge Johnston that his work on the Bench, particularly since the introduction of the Speedy Trials Act, was equal to that performed by any other two judges in the province. His son, Mayor Johnston of Dartmouth, married a daughter of the late T. D. Ruggles of this town. Overwork was largely responsible for his illness, which was aggravated by an attack of rheumatic gout.

The long continued gravitation of the country people to the city and the constant stream of old world immigrants have sated the urban appetites, and the clites have settled down to a steady growth that does not require the same heavy drafts of bone and sinew from the country.
