

DETAILED FINDINGS

SECTION I: CANADA'S INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

HUMAN RIGHTS VIOLATIONS

Canada's International Policy

While a plurality (41%) of Canadians are "somewhat familiar" with Canada's international policy when it comes to human rights violations by governments in other countries, most (53%) are either "not very familiar" (35%) or "not at all familiar" (18%) with it. Only six percent (6%) of respondents claim to be "very familiar" with Canada's policy.

Canada's International Policy for Human Rights Violations of Foreign Governments

"How familiar are you with Canada's international policy when it comes to human rights violations by governments in other countries: very familiar, somewhat familiar, not very familiar or not at all familiar?"

Base: All respondents: 1500

Across all socio-economic sub-groupings of respondents, there is very little variation with regard to those who are "very familiar" with Canada's international policy when it comes to human rights violations. Overall, there is only a small percentage (ranging from 3% of Quebec residents to 11% of both Albertans and university graduates) of the Canadian population that fit into this category.