

	Page
Defects in former treaties to be avoided in future	xviii
On the Indian trade of the British colonists	xix
Suggestions as to the boundaries which should be defined in future treaties	xx
Ruinous consequences resulting from the relaxation of the maritime rights of Great Britain, and the suspension of the navigation and colonial system	xxv
Canada—its present state and resources	xxix
Intended resumption of former system proved by the mea- sures adopted in Mr. Pitt's last administration	xxxii
2 An account of the timber trade of the British American provinces from the reign of queen Ann to the present time	xxxiii
Suggestions for the encouragement and extension of this trade	xxxvii
Statement of the duties imposed on timber, &c. from the United States compared with the duties on the same articles from other countries	xxxviii
On the cultivation of hemp and flax in the provinces and their importance	xl
Nova Scotia and New Brunswick—their present state and resources	xliv
Their importance to Great Britain as a maritime power	ib.
Their capability, with Canada and the mother country, to supply fish, lumber, provisions, &c. to the British West India islands	ib.
State of the fisheries of these colonies, and on the necessity of excluding the Americans from them	xlviii
On their fish trade to Europe	li
Impolicy of impressing British fishermen	liii
Suspension of navigation and colonial system injurious to British plantation shipping	lv
Decrease of plantation built ships under the new system	lvi
Decrease of British ships in the direct trade with the United States	ib.
Decrease of ship-building in Great Britain	lvii