Judgment: I find the plaintiff has a good paper title. I find that John regarded himself as caretaker for Archibald, he, John, was not placed in possession of any part of Archibald's land, and he did not go into possession so as to be in actual visible, exclusive and continuous possession or occupation. The improvements made by George such as can be particularly pointed out and continuous possession or occupation. The improvements made by George such as can be particularly pointed out as made for the use of George in his possession, has been or may have been made within ten years prior to George's death. In my opinion the defendant has not satisfied the onus of establishing that George had the possession required by law for the whole statutory period so as to bar the plaintiff's title. Jurgment will be for plaintiff or the land and for possession and with costs. There may be a declaration that the land in question was not owned by Geo. McMillan at the time of his death.
