General Wood's Words.

Major-General Leonard Wood, commander of the department of the east and former chief of the general staff, U.S.A., speaking before the Senate military affairs sub-committee on January 31, said that a rejection of the Lewis gun would be in the nature of a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp was not tich, but what will please you most will be after a few week's use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the _caip.

WILSON MAY ORDER FLEET TO CONVOY AMERICAN VESSELS

That Is Likely To Be the Next Move of U.S.

SHIPPING IS HAMPERED

Idleness of American Merchant Fleet Exasperating To Washington.

New York, Feb. 10.—An Associated Press dispatch from Washington this morning says: "Late reports of ships sunk by German submarines were scanned eagerly by Government officials today for a double reason. First, there was the ever-present fear that any hour might bring a dispatch saying an American ship should be sunk without warning or American lives lost, thus driving the United States to use force to protect its rights.

Second, yesterday's reported falling off of aggregate tonnage sunk, produced wonder as to whether the fallure was only temporary or whether Great Britain has already done something to lessen the force of the submersibles' attacks.

In reference to the chapters of a more gress Committee Considered Convincing.

Washington, Feb. 9.—A wrong impression has been given during the past month in the press of the United States concerning the present status of the Lewis machine gun in the United States war department.

In reference to the chances of a more pronounced break with Germany, it is disclosed that the precise course of the United States has been determined. President Wilson will not ask Congress for a declaration of war, but only for authority to take necessary measures to protect neutral rights. This would still leave the first act of open hostilities to Germany's choosing. The convoying of merchant vessels by American warcraft might be ordered.

the Lewis machine gun in the United States war department.

The recent announcement of rejection of the gun was misconstrued. The machine gun board recently appointed by the Secretary of War Baker feviewed the rejection of the Lewis in April, 1916, by a board of officers, appointed to observe endurance tests conducted at the Springfield Arsenal, and sustained the rejection of that date. The secretary of war sustained the action of the machine gun board and issued a general order forbidding any further discussion by army officers favoring the merits of the Lewis gun. However, a month previous the machine gun board had made a preliminary report to the secretary of war, in arv report to the secretary of war, in the Lewis gun.

A daily destruction of 33,000 tons would be necessary to maintain the rate which the German admiralty believes sufficient to isolate England.

One of the principal questions discussed at the cabinet meeting late yesterday was the threatened hampering of American ports much longer by fear of risking submarine dangers, it was authoritatively said after the cabinet meeting that no new situation had developed to change the policy of the Government.

Germany Cuts Loose From Civilization

"Having begun the European war by an act of perfidy, the German Government now seeks to end it by an act of criminal insanity. In a mad lurch away from the efforts to bring about peace by reason and negotiation, the German authorities announce that they will begin this day to run amuck on the high seas. indignantly characterizes Germany's determination to wield an unrestricted submarine warfare on neutrals as well as foes in a new war zone, while other newspapers are scarcely less outspoken.

In severing diplomatic relations with Germany as a result of that country's new attitude, President Wilson has not done the unexpected. Even Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, is quoted as saying: "I am not surprised. My Government will not be surprised either. The people in Berlin knew what was bound to happen if they took the action they have taken. There was nothing else left for the United President Wilson finds the country solidly behind him. Racial lines have practically disappeared, and, to quote the words of the New York Globe: "If war comes, it will be a holy and righteous one—a war on war, a war for peace, a war for a better world.'
