JUDGMENT QUASHED
Court of Appeal Decides Judge and Magistrate Had No Jurisdiction.
The conviction of John O'Gorman, William J. Mulloy, Daniel Wiley and George M. Reid in the London election conspiracy case was quashed by the court of appeal yesterday. The men were found guilty of bribery before Judge Winchester in November, 1907.
The grounds upon which the conviction was quashed were that Magistrate Denison had no jurisdiction to commit the prisoners for trial and that Judge Winchester had no jurisdiction to commit them.
"The only natural and proper place of trial was at London," says Mr. Justice Garrow. "The attempt to force the trial at the latter city, and the opposition to the very reasonable proposition to change the venue, which, if granted, would have obviated all difficulties, savors of unfairness and even of oppression."
