

in daily conduct, together with a conscientious discharge of all duties, are required of all those who enter the Institution.

All pupils who through persistent negligence of duty, and through repeated betrayal of the trust reposed in them, show that they do not enter into the spirit of the Institution, will be removed from the school. In no other way can the standard of the Seminary be maintained, and its object accomplished.

Progress in study is seriously interrupted by making too frequent home visits. Visiting is therefore discouraged, as it divides the interest of the pupil and interferes with the regularity of school life and progress. Every Saturday has its appropriate duties and is valuable to the pupil. Absence on Sunday is particularly detrimental to the religious and home influences of the school. On these days, however, students are permitted to go to their homes and accept occasional invitations from near relatives in the vicinity, provided a request from parents, giving reasons satisfactory to the Principal is presented. It is conducive to the advancement of pupils that their social mingling with friends in the Town be confined to the making of calls at times assigned for recreation, for which excuses are granted. Pupils are also permitted to accept occasional invitations to dinner on Saturdays from friends in the Town. All invitations to parties or social gatherings must be refused.

To relieve the teachers of undue responsibility, calls from young gentlemen, other than the brothers of the pupils can be received only upon the written request of the parents or guardians, addressed to the Principal. Young ladies receive weekly calls from their brothers who may be attending Acadia University or Horton Academy. Receptions are held at intervals by the teachers and students to which the different classes of the University and Academy are invited.

A pleasing and beneficial feature of the home and social training in the school is the "Etiquette Box," into which questions may be dropped by the students. It is opened at
