NO USE IN THAT COUNTRY. A distinguished man lay on his death-bed, when a great mark of distinction and honor was brought to him. Turping a cold glance on the treasure he would once have clutched with an eager grasp, he said, with a sigh, "Alas! this is a mighty fine thing in this country, but I am going to a country where it will be of no use to me. It was becoming late in the evening, and one after another, seeking repose from the cares and toils of the day, made preparations to retire to their berths. Some pulling off their boots and coats, laid themselves down to rest; others, in the attemp to make it seem as much like home as possi ble, threw off more of their clothing each one as their comfort or apprehension of danger dictated. I had noticed on deck a fine-looking boy about six years of age, following around a Ans.—Because they must be shelled out be man, evidently his father, whose appearance indicated him to be a foreigner, probably a German—a man of medium height and respectable dress. The child was unusually fair and fine looking handsomely featured other brings you up. fair and fine looking, handsomely featured with an affectionate expression of counte nance : and from under his German cap fell chestnut hair in thick clustering curls.

After walking about the cabin for a time, the father and son stopped within a few feet of where we were, and began preparations to go to bed. I watched them. The father adjusted and arranged the bed the child was to occupy, which was an upper berth, while the little fellow undressed himself. Having finished this, the father tied a handkerchie around his head, to protect his curle, which looked as if the sunlight from his happy heart always rested there. This done, I looked for him to seek his resting-place; but instead of this, he quietly kneeled down upon the floor, put his little hands together sc beautifully childlike, and simple, resting said when he was blown up by a powder mill.

This was the training of some mother?

Where was she now? How many times had her kind hand been laid on his sunny locks as she had taught him to lisp his prayer? A beautiful sight it was, that child at prayer, in the midst of the busy, thought-

EARLY INFLUENCES .- There can be no greater blessing than to be born in the light and air of a cheerful, loving home.
