Second Line Trenches

By a High Schooler.

OUT on the campus the students of the High School amused themselves in various ways, as they waited for the summons to begin another day's study. The chief amusement was baseball, and we who did not have enough energy to play, sat around on the grass and chatted. It was a beautiful spring day, just in the beginning of April; the birds sang overhead, and we were quite content to lie lazily in the warm sunlight and let everything else go. But our peace was soon brought to an end by the ring of the bell and as "Mac" put it—"We went forth once more to battle with the mysteries of geometry and Latin." Each class took its place in the Assembly Hall and after the usual opening exercises Mr. Davidson, the principal, paused a moment; we knew that pause too well, for it usually meant a "lecture" about something. "Gee," the next fellow remarked, "I wonder if it's those French marks, I only got ten." It wasn't French this time, though. Mr. Davidson started to speak. "Boys!" he said, "I have something very important to tell you this morning. I have just received a letter saying that any boys who go farming this summer will get the certificate which they would try for at June." He went on and told us the great need for increased production and ended up by saying: "You know, boys, what the call is, and it's up to you. In times of peace the old school has always led in every game and now will we let it go behind in the greatest game of all? Now, how many of you will volunteer to work on the farm for the summer?" We rose to a man, or rather to a boy. "Good!" replied "Davy." "The exams. will start one week from to-day and all who pass are free to go." That week will stand out in the history of the school as the week in which more studying was done than ever before. So well did we study that not one failed and now one hundred and twenty boys from the — High School are right on the job helping to hold the second line trenches.

"The Blind of Canada"

the admission of 207 boys and girls of the Maritime Provinces who were, in 1911, under 20 years of age. The same discrepancy will probably hold good in the rest of the Dominion. A truer estimate of the blind of Canada would probably show one blind person for each 1,200 of the population, and one blind person of schoolable age to each seven thousand of the population.

Fifty years hence will probably show a great development in work for the blind throughout the Dominion, and it is not too much to hope that long before the Centennial of Canada's birth not only the education of the youthful blind in all parts of the Dominion, but the training and employment of the adult blind, and measures for the prevention of blindness will receive the attention and support which these movements so fully deserve.

Let me say, in closing, that Canada may claim to have led the world in the enactment of postal regulations whereby embossed books for the blind are carried through the mails free of charge, and with this great forward step the name of Sir William Mulock, ex-Postmaster General of Canada, will always be honourably associated.
