HIS MAJESTY KING EDWARD OPENS BRITISH PARLIAMENT

Brilliant Scenes Attending the Ceremony—Royal Procession to House of Lords—Imposing State Pageantry—Their Majesties Enthusiastically Greeted.

London, Jan. 16.—King Edward opened Parliament this afternoon with a ceremonial in all essential respects similar to that of February last. The procession to the House of Lords was of the same character as that witnessed on the occasion of the opening of the first Parliament of King Edward's reign, while within the upper House was seen the same state pageantry, the same historic dresses and the same revival of ancient forms.

On alighting at the royal entrance of the Houses of Parliament, beneath the Victorian Tower, King Edward and Queen Alexandra were met by the high officers of state, and were conducted to the robing rooms. Having assumed their gorgeous robes, the procession was formed, and preceded by the Duke of Devonshire, Lord President of the Council, bearing the Imperial Crown, and the heralds and pursuivants, they entered the House of Peers amid a fanfare of trumpets.

KING EDWARD VII.

King Edward and Queen Alexandra, having entered the House of Peers, occupied their thrones beneath a canopy, with the Prince and Princess of Wales on either side of them. The other members of the royal family were seated on chairs at the foot of the steps leading to the thrones. The scene in the gilded chamber was very brilliant. State officers, ambassadors and ministers in handsome uniforms, and peers and peeresses in vari-colored robes, filled every nook. The King, beneath his robes, wore a field marshal's uniform. The Queen's dress was of black velvet, surmounted by a robe trimmed with ermine. The peeresses all wore ostrich feathers in their hair and were richly clad in evening robes of the most varied colors, which, however, predominating. The display of jewels was unusually dazzling.

The Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, General Sir Michael Biddulph, having summoned the Speaker and the members of the House of Commons, His Majesty read the

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

The speech was not an important utterance. His Majesty referred in grateful terms to the world tour of the Prince and Princess of Wales, expressed regret at the fact that the war in South Africa was not concluded, said he trusted the decision of the sugar conference would lead to the abandonment of bounties, and noted the conclusion of the Isthmian Canal treaty. The speech opened with a reference to the tour of the Prince and Princess of Wales. "They were everywhere," said the King, "received with demonstrations of the liveliest affection, and I am convinced their presence served to rivet more closely the bonds of mutual regard and loyalty by which the vigor of the Empire is maintained."

Referring to Great Britain's relations with foreign countries, the King said:—"My relations with the other powers continue to be of a friendly character."

Contrary to expectations, the King's reference to the war was just as indefinite as the statements on the subject made in the last half dozen messages from the throne. "I regret," said His Majesty, "that the war in South Africa is not yet concluded, though the course of operations has been favorable to our arms, the area of war largely reduced, and industries are being resumed in my new colonies. In spite of the tedious character of the campaign, my soldiers throughout have displayed a cheerfulness in the endurance of the hardships incident to a guerilla warfare, and a humanity, even to their own detriment, in their treatment of the enemy, which are deserving of the highest praise. The necessity for relieving those of my troops who have most felt the strain of war has afforded me the opportunity of again availing myself of the loyal and patriotic offers of my colonies, and further contingents will shortly reach South Africa from the Dominion of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia and New Zealand."

In regard to the sugar conference the speech says:—"I trust its decision may lead to the abandonment of the system by which the sugar-producing colonies and home manufacturers of sugar have been unfairly weighted in protection of this important industry."

Then came the following clause:—"I have concluded with the President of the United States a treaty, the provisions of which will facilitate the construction of an inter-oceanic canal under guarantees that its neutrality will be maintained, and that it will be open to the commerce and shipping of all nations."

Next followed references to the Anglo-Brazilian treaty, to the referring of the British Guiana-Brazil boundary questions to the arbitration of the King of Italy, to the necessity for the continuance of famine relief measures in India, and to the death of the Amir, "whose son, Habib Ullah, has expressed an earnest desire to maintain the friendly relations of Afghanistan with my Indian Empire."

After announcing that the estimates have "been framed as economically as due regard for their efficacy renders possible in the special circumstances of the present exigencies," the speech concluded with mentioning proposed legislation of solely domestic interest, with the exception of a bill to facilitate the sale and purchase of land in Ireland.

The one departure from the extremely decorous character of the proceedings occurred when the King referred to the humanity of the British troops in South Africa. This led to an unprecedented scene in the House of Lords. Peers and Peeresses and high officers of state broke out into a prolonged cheer, which was repeated again and again, to the evident satisfaction of His Majesty, but to the apparent dismay of the officials of the House.

GREETED WITH ENTHUSIASM.

Their Majesties then retired amid a fanfare of trumpets and attended by the same regal ceremony as accompanied their entry into the House. They were greeted enthusiastically. As they sat in the great state coach, whose gilded pinnacles brushed the boughs of the trees in the green park, King Edward and Queen Alexandra looked for all the world like a flattering painting of Henry VIII. and one of his better-looking spouses. The King and Queen both looked extremely well.

PARLIAMENT'S PROCEEDING

British Liberals Advocate Conciliatory Policy Towards the Boers.

Addresses by Salisbury, Rosebery, Chamberlain and Harcourt.

London, Jan. 16.—The House of Lords was well filled when business was resumed. The Prince of Wales occupied the seat formerly used by his father. Many Peeresses were in the gallery.

The Lord Chancellor, Earl Halsbury, formally read the King's speech.

The Earl of Harrowby, Conservative, in moving the address in reply to the speech from the throne, referred to the non-interference of foreign powers in the South African war, as being evidence of their friendly relations.

The Earl of Lytton, who seconded the motion, congratulated the government on their more than friendly relations with the United States and the South American Republics, and added that though affairs in Ireland were considered critical, they might safely be left in the hands of the government.

Earl Spencer, Liberal, criticising the address, said that while he recognized the impossibility of granting the Boer demands for independence, yet he deprecated insisting on unconditional surrender. His Lordship urged the government to promise the Boers autonomy similar to the governments of Australia and Canada.

Thereafter, Lord Salisbury, whose entrance into the house was greeted with hearty applause, said he was glad to hear Earl Spencer vent an utterance, for which he, the Premier, had been frequently and unapologetically condemned. It was quite true that there was no possibility of granting the Boers independence. Neither was it the government's business, after being gratuitously attacked, to inform the Boers on what terms they would be forgiven, especially since the Boers had not yet expressed a wish to be forgiven. Lord Salisbury continued by defending the martial law in South Africa, and urged the opposition to remember they were not dealing with the question whether they could make out a good case against the government. He reminded the opposition that a wrong settlement now would impose grave difficulties and embarrassments upon the nation many years to come.

Replying to the Premier, Lord Rosebery said:—
