ANXIOUS NIGHT

Four Little Maple City Lads Set Out From Erie Beach and Were Absent in Storm Till Morning.

A very anxious night was spent by the cottagers at Erie Beach last night by the absence in the storm of four little Maple City lads who had gone forth on a little pleasure stunt with picnic baskets—and failed to return.

The four intrepid boys, Robert, Douglas and Hume Stone and Lawrence Glass, started from the beach shortly before noon, removed their shoes and stockings and walked down to the piers at Erieau, a distance of some seven miles. While playing on the piers they were overtaken by the rain and storm, but seemed to thoroughly enjoy it and remained playing there until they were thoroughly drenched.

Finally they made their way to S. M. Glenn's cottage late in the afternoon, where Mr. Glenn took them in and removed their dripping clothing. There they stayed over night and returned to Blenheim on this morning's train.

Meanwhile, as can be imagined, the parents and friends at the Beach put in a very troubled night. Search parties were instituted and much anxiety was felt. It was a great relief when the valiant quartette turned up safe and sound this morning.

Weather continues cool with showers.

The faultless man is usually friendless.

Dignity and love do not blend well, nor do they combine long together.

Loose Collars.

Perhaps there is no more fruitful source of sore shoulders in working horses than the too common practice of leaving the hamestraps loosely buckled over the collar. Even moderately tight hames will, in heavy work, allow of an amount of play, sure to result in galls, especially if the collar is not, as it too often is not, a perfect fit for the shoulder on which it is placed. One cannot always be sure of anything more than an approximately well-fitting collar, but if the hames are so adjusted over it that when tightly buckled on, the sides of the collar press pretty firmly to the sides of the neck, and given reasonable care to the collars and shoulders daily in other ways, it will be found that the poorest shoulders on the farm will get along without the soreness and galls only too common as the result of neglecting to do this.

Made Only in Bridgewater, Eng.

The Westminster Gazette says: Few would connect the common bath-brick of our kitchen with a caprice of nature, or would credit that there is but one spot on the entire globe where these scouring-bricks can be manufactured. Yet so it is, for all bath-bricks are made in Bridgewater, in Somersetshire, and there only, because the River Parrett deposits for a distance of a few hundred yards only the peculiar compound of sand and slime of which they are composed. Farther up the stream the salt contains too much mud, lower down the proportion of sand is too great. Every ebb, therefore, the workmen remove the soil from this favored spot which Dame Nature has placed there the previous tide. Nowhere else in the world is a similar compound to be found.

Poetry.

Poetry does not mean only the clothing of beautiful thought in harmonious language; it means also the spiritualizing of life, the tingeing every common object with the warm sunshine of sympathy and love. Just as on rainy days the slush and grimy mud are swept away and put on one side, so the sunshiny nature will naturally dismiss all mean and sordid thoughts and turn to what is true and noble and pure, as "the sunflower turns to the face of its god."
