from London: "Can Insanity be Cured by Surgical Operation?" was the sub-ject of a lecture delivered before the In-corporated British Phrenological So-ciety by Dr. Bernard Hollander, a well-known physician for mental diseases, who early this year caused a sensation by the publication in The Lancet and other medical journals of a report of a successful cure of mental derangement by traphing.

Do. Hollander created another sensation in the course of his lecture by describing the case of a boy, aged sixteen, who was a liar and a thief, but who,
after the removal of a strip of bone
from his skull, was restored to a state of perfect morality.

This boy had to be constantly watched to keep him from destroying things, from thrashing his fellow-pupils and throwing stones. He told falsehoods and had a tendency to steal; he had no sense of decency, and grew more dangerous the older he got until his deeds brought him before the Police Court.

Dr. Hollander proposed the removal of a strip of bone from the centre line of the head. This was carried out. An incision was made from the top of the head vertically down to each ear, when the tissues above the right ear revealed signs of an old injury. After several trephinings had been made the bone was cut away on the right side, where the membrane of the brain showed signs of an old hemorrhage.

After being treated antiseptically the After being treated antheapedemy the wound was closed and healed success-fully. The patient got gradually better and behaved properly, and not only did he lose his bad propensities, but showed high moral feeling.

high moral feeling.

Dr. Hollander is convinced by this experience that many sufferers might be rescued from living tombs to take their part again in the world's work by a simple surgical operation.

He thinks that newly arrived and cuhable cases being brought into an atmosphere that is already saturated with lunacy become aggravated instead of cured.

Fifty years ago, he says, there was doubt as to the possibility of localiza-tion, but to-day it is an accepted do-trine, that there is a plurality of cen-tres in the brain with definite functions, and that injury or disease of a circum scribed portion of the brain can cause scribed portion of the brain can cause derangement of the mental power which is located there. Of course, when insanity is due to some toxic instance, some poison that has got into the system, then the whole brain may suffer and all the mental powers may become deranged.

Every effort, he says, has been made to conceal the truth, and, of course, the usual formal official denials will be issued, although it is well known that they will convince no one. There can be no real reason for keeping the King's cordition from the public. Fortunately youth is on the side of the young King and every possible care will be taken of him, so far as his own reatless temperament will permit; but what lends special gravity to the lung trouble is, of course, the fact that it is inherited from a short-lived father.
