The Halifax Recorder of Friday last says: When the 2:30 p. m. ferry boat was leaving the Dartmouth side to-day there were a large number of wagons on board, the last to go on being Captain Lloy's, driven by a 14 year old youth named Cunningham. There was hardly room for fastening the chain in rear of the wagons, the team in front of Lloy's a little further ahead, but the horse backed and the wagon touching Lloy's horse it also backed, and the wagon going over was followed by the boy and horse; the boy tried to jump but failed, and went down with the team. Fully a minute and a half after, as the horse was plunging round, he was seen to come up almost to the animal's feet, and a life preserver was thrown to him, and he was soon safe on board. Those who were present say his escape from the struggling horse's hoofs was something miraculous.

EARLY on Friday morning last John McEasters fell from his sleeping room, in the upper story of Stevenson's building, Queen street, to the sidewalk, and sustained injuries from which he died on Sunday.
