Betafo is a Vicariate in Madagascar, presided over by Bishop Joseph Dantin, of the La Salette Fathers.

In a report sent to the national ffice of the S. P. F., he states ike so many other Bishops that the work forming cathecists is of fundamental importance. So, in pite of war stress, the school has been enlarged. It costs about wenty American dollars to board youth in this school for one year, and no better use could such an offering be put to.

A large part of Betafo is even yet without any Christian centres, but in more than twenty villages the natives are eagerly demanding a catechist, offering to construct their modest chapels without any aid. "When," exclaims the Bishop, "shall we have catechists to give these good people?"
