NATIONALISM

The Toronto News suggests that the 'nationalism' and "patriotism" of the Conservative party is not to questioned. There is no need to ques tion it. The motive may be granted but the manner of its e xpression condemned. Liberals may concede to their opponents the best of intention and still properly claim that those opponents propose a sadly mistaken plan for carrying out that intention The patriotism and nationalism of the Conservative party may be quite sincere-and still their policy be neither national in its scope or patriotic in
