Five Vessels

While five of our foreign fish carriers-the Earlshall, Clutha, Attila, Waterwitch and a three-masted schr. early yesterday morning trying to make the land, a terrific snow storm suddenly came on and as a result, the former went ashore at Shoal Bay. Bay Bulls, and became a total wreck the crew barely escaping with their lives, after a desperate struggle. The Brazilian ports and each made an excellent run as far as Cape Race. On Saturday last they passed Cape Race, each at a different hour. Much ice was met, but the vessels kept well south and skirted the floe. Saturday evening, after passing Ferryland Head, all were practically together. It was impossible to make the Narrows so the vessels 'wore' for the night. About three o'clock a snow storm came on. The vessels were then in speaking distance of each other. The Attila was nearest the Earlshall and the latter was hearing of the ice conditions. The wind began to increase and the snow became dense, almost impossible to see a light at Cape Spear. The Earlshall moved away from the Attila and the latter and the other vessels headed for the Narrows reaching port safely About four o'clock cook Cahil came or deck to give the crew hot coffee. Suddenly there was a crash. The vessel had struck the land near Petty Harbor Motion, about practically the same place as where the Regulus met her fate. Capt. Coward was below 'turned in' at the time and the mate was on watch. There was a tremendous sea running and the vessel was was and St. Bon's will try conclusions pounded heavily against the rocks this evening if the ice is good enough and leaking badly. Hear ye not the marriar music:
Hear ye not the rolling drum?
'Tis a world-wide voice that calls you;
Bids you to the colors come!
Will you hearken not the mandate As it surges o'er the seas? Does the flag arouse no answer While it floats upon the breeze?
From the fierceness of the storm!
Liberty, to which you cling;
You are wanted, O, my brothers!

Empire needs you, and-your King! comes there not, with peal of music Through your hearts, a battle hymn' Burns there not the flame within you In the pride of life and limb?

Ye are citizens of Empire—
Heritage of priceless worth;
Free-born, while the flag keeps flying
O'er the citadels of earth! Shall you, now that this is threatened Hesitate to hold it firm? Rally round it and protect it From the fierceness of he storm!

Dear to heart of every Briton Is that flag of England's pow'r; Where'er fixed, behold the message It conveys from mast or tow'r. Ye are sons of Britain's greatness; Builders of her holy bond, And to all her word is binding, As both weak and strong have
