The Maiden's Curse

OR THE LAIRD OF BIRKENHOLM

A Tale of the Covenanters.

Sir Gilbert was decidedly nervous, being sufficiently so to prevent him from eating a hearty meal. From his position in the corner of the Recluse lay watching him with the keen piercing eyes which the Baronet had noticed him to possess, and which seemed so singularly out of harmony with his aged and venerable appearance. As he lay dividing his glances between the eater and the deep slumberer on the mossy couch, the expression of his face was one of mingled trouble, suffering, and passion, and evidently the most acute feeling agitated his bosom, for it beamed violently, and his limbs shook and trembled.

The scene was altogether weird and impressive. Outside the snowstorm still raged furiously, and the wind roared with a howling, rushing, hissing noise among the crags which overhung the cave. Inside, the fire, composed of blazing pine logs, lighted up with fitful gleams the black, rugged, rocky walls of the shapeless chamber, whose fantastic excrescences loomed through the changeful light like horrid shapes of beings unearthly and fiendish. The imagination could easily conjure up the vision of frightful eyes glaring through the lurid redness, and the varying sounds of the wind were easily magnified into noises made by beings more than mortal.

Amid the turmoil, the gloom, and desolation, Helen continued to sleep soundly and calmly, and the Baronet envied her the deep repose. Now that his hunger was appeased, the heat from the fire made him excessively drowsy, and a strong desire to sleep came upon him. Nay, he must have unconsciously gone off into a dose for he was suddenly roused by a dark shadow before him, and found that the Hermit was heaping more logs on the fire.

"Your couch is spread in yonder corner when you wish to go to rest," he remarked. Sir Gilbert rubbed his eyes and looked around. On the side of the cave opposite from where Helen lay an abundant quantity of dry grass had been laid, with a bundle of the same artificially bound for a pillow.

"You will find yourself more scant of covering than you are accustomed to," added his host; "but I seldom have visitors, and am ill provided for their comfort. The lady is heaped with all my woollen fabrics."

"Hoots, toots, canny man, nae apology," returned Sir Gilbert. "I'm only sorry for puttin' ye sair about. The bed is a prime one, and—and you and me shall keep it tiller warm."

"I sleep in the other place," was the quiet reply. "What! beside the bees? Na, na, I wunna hear of that!"

But the Recluse was as peremptory and decided regarding this as he was regarding eating in the Baronet's company, and presently withdrew, passing between the ledges into the adjoining chamber.

"Losh me, but that's a erator that maun hae his ain way," muttered the Baronet, as he rose and prepared to stretch his weary limbs on the comfortable resting couch which had been provided. Ere doing so, he crossed over to Helen's couch, and found her still enjoying the same profound and dreamless repose.

In two minutes he was snuily ensconced among the grass, and had sunk into the same dead sleep.

Many hours later the chains which had kept Helen's soul in such blessed and reviving bondage unloosened themselves, and slowly she awoke.

She awoke in darkness to a confused and imperfect recollection of the circumstance in which consciousness had deserted her, and of course, in utter ignorance of where she was.

Her first dawning impression was that she had had a fearful dream, but as her faculties became more awake, her recollections grew more particular and specific, and she remembered the dream-light-ride through the cold and the storm—how her frame became benumbed and her senses faded away—her last dim recollection being that of falling helplessly from the horse upon the snow.

From then till now she had been in utter oblivion.

Naturally she began to wonder where she was, and how circumstanced. She was warm, and felt strong and refreshed. She concluded, therefore, that Patie had ultimately carried them to some shelter, and she felt great curiosity to know what kind of a shelter it was.

She opened her eyes and looked around. There was darkness everywhere, except in one direction, where the light of day came through some broken chinks, and a little from this she saw the red embers of a fire. She raised herself and looked more narrowly when, in the dim light, the general features of the cavern presented themselves, and roused her excessive wonder.

Listening, she heard a sound which she gladly recognised—the sound of Sir Gilbert Barton snoring, and thus learned that he too was safe, and beside her.

AT IT AGAIN.

From unforeseen circumstances, I am obliged to once more plunge into the torments of active business life. It affords me no small degree of pleasure and satisfaction to know that I am still to continue to serve and be a means of profit to the great mass of the inhabitants of the County of Wellington and its vicinity. I shall in the time to come, as in the past, make it a study and one of the leading features in my business affairs at all times to be in a position to secure Goods in the very best markets, and to the best possible advantage. My purchases will all be made for Ready Money—and money will command Bargains such as credit cannot. This advantage will be given to my customers. It is needless to remind my numerous friends and supporters that the immense variety of every description of Goods presented to select from is a very great advantage, together with the undeniable fact that my Goods are all imported from the manufacturers direct, ensures to my patrons a saving of a fair profit over that of any other establishment in the trade. I possess great advantages this season for offering extra inducements to my customers.

COTTON GOODS have all advanced very rapidly within the last month. During the period of panic prices I bought heavily, indeed sufficient to do my business requirements during the summer. Since an advance of fully forty per cent. has taken place.

My stock now in every branch is full, and an early call from my old friends will be well repaid both as regards value to select from, and the great saving to be effected in price.

Thanking you for past favors, I remain yours,

WHO CAN TELL

How Nature Colors the Peach?
How Nature Colors the Plum?
How Nature Colors the Green Grape,
And Berries of various kinds?

The celebrated Portuguese Chemist and Botanist, Professor, Esmeraldo, has contributed one of the most useful and valuable discoveries of the age for the benefit of mankind, and known as

PROFESSOR ESMERALDO'S PELLATITE.

This Pellatite is the Concrete Juice of the Fruit of the Anthemium Pyrethrum, a Brazilian Shrub that grows along the banks of the Amazon River. This fruit and its Juice possess the peculiar property of imparting its color to the Human Hair only, and gives it an elegant, Soft, Glossy, Brown or Black Color, promoting its rapid and luxuriant growth—it will not stain the skin or clothing. Among Ladies and Gentlemen whose hair is turning or already become grey, the Pellatite stands as

THE VICTORIA

OF ALL

GREY HAIR RESTORERS!

It differs from all others as follows:

The Joyful Side. The Melancholy Side.

THE PELLATITE! Other Preparations

Are all made of preparations of Lead, Sulphur, Lime, Chemicals and Minerals. They chrysalis on the hair and makes it stiff and harsh. They stain the hair and ruin its color. They are filthy—obscene!

It is clean and harmless as water. It imparts its colour at once. It is free from mineral and chemicals. It softens and glosses the Hair. It is healing to the scalp. It removes Dandruff and Scurf. It combines a Hair Dressing. It combines a Color Restorer. It predisposes the Hair to Curl. It is indispensable, and it is universally desired.

WHAT THEY DO. They are carried to the brain by the absorption—cause pain in the Head, Dizziness, Billings, Softening of the Brain, Lunacy and Death.

HOW THEY ARE PUT UP. They are put in Colored Glass Bottles, with the Labels closely passed around them from the factory to the consumer to hide the demon inside.

WHICH WILL YOU HAVE? WHICH WILL YOU USE?

Compare them. Test them and decide. Away with filthy, dangerous Compounds, and use the clean and Harmless Pellatite.

At one bound it sweeps the field, and the old foggy credulities of Minerals are dropped by the public like a red hot iron.

Go to your nearest Druggist and ask him to furnish you with the Pellatite. Don't fail to give it a trial, and don't wait until your Hair is destroyed or you are the inmate of a Lunatic Asylum. Go at once.

What the People Say:

"It does not stain the skin, but colors the Hair immediately."

"Professor—My head was sore from other Dyes. Your Pellatite healed my scalp and colored my hair beautifully."

"I am delighted with your Pellatite—I will never again use any other wash or dye—your Pellatite is a Botanic Wonder, and no mistake."

"It operates like magic."

"Employed and $5 for six bottles more. Send immediately."

"Your Pellatite leaves my hair soft and smooth. Other dyes made it harsh and brittle."

"Since using your Pellatite my head is entirely free from pain and ache."
