ANNABEL

THE TEMPTATION.
CHAPTER XX.
ARRIVAL AT DODDEN.
"Rather," assented the woman, who seemed to answer indifferently to the names of Moll and Mother Crimp, and who was indeed no other than the keeper of the lodging-house which Bernard Hayes had visited in search of Dick Mattocks.

"And it ain't so jolly either, I suspect," said Dick.
"Not in some ways," responded Moll.
"Then is there the noise or the fact, but neither is there the worry; and we've got plenty to eat and drink, and little to do for it. That suits me uncommon."

"You mean on the girl upstairs?"
"Dick nodded, while his pig eyes gleamed with a lurid flash.
"Why are you so savage on her? I thought it was the young fellow you have your knife in."

"Well, you didn't need to be so stupid. He will be told she's dead, and he'll believe it. There's a stab for him."
"Out in sharp and keen only for a time. He'll get over it and marry another."

"Not he. You've no idea how soft he is on her. Hayes tells me it will cut him up for life. Then if a thin skin should at some time come on the cut I may manage to let him know the truth, and that I had power over the girl here, and tortured her body and soul till death came to end her misery. Oh, how he'll writhe at that. Trust me, Moll, I'll get my revenge on both of them—ha, ha—the fullest revenge a man could wish for. She wants to know why I've brought her here, does she? So she shall, she shall know all now—all, Moll; and won't it take the hope out of her and put the agony in? Oh, yes, to-morrow I'll tell her everything. No need for keeping her longer in the dark. Why, I fancy she'll find the dark was easier to bear than the light. Fill up, old lass, and let us drink to our good luck and jollification in this old room of a building."

MORRISTON HOTEL.
For sale, that well-known old establishment and hotel, known as the Morrison Hotel, in the Village of Morrison, on the Brock Road, 9 miles from Guelph, and 10 miles from Hamilton. It is a substantial stone and frame building, containing all the necessary accommodations for doing a large business. Attached to it are also commodious stables and driving shed, hard and soft wood, and everything complete. There is a large garden belonging to the hotel, also a good house and a fair bank near the Hotel of the public.

The hotel is situated in the heart of a thriving village, and fine farming country surrounding. It is also the leading hotel on the Brock Road between Guelph and Hamilton, and has enjoyed for many years a large and remunerative business. The present proprietor is giving up solely on account of ill health.
For terms and other particulars apply to the undersigned, the proprietor, on the premises, or by letter post-paid, to Morris-
