LABOR DAY TO BE CELEBRATED

Demonstration Will Be Held Here This Year.

Trades and Labor Council Do Not Approve of Plan of Lord's Day Alliance.

The Trades and Labor Council met last night and considered the question of celebrating Labor Day in this city. After fully discussing the matter, it was decided to have a demonstration here, and to make it excel all that have formerly been held in this city.

The council received a letter from the Lord's Day Alliance asking co-operation in securing legislation for the cessation of all Sunday traffic on steam and electric railways. It was decided that this would be unwise, and the secretary was instructed to reply, expressing appreciation for the work of the alliance, and stating that the council could not approve of the proposal to cut off all traffic on Sunday, a certain amount being, in their opinion, necessary.

The committee appointed to confer with the Typographical Union respecting their representation upon the council, reported that in their opinion the difference might be overcome, and the union's delegates seated; but the union itself wrote, refusing to recognize the council's right to dictate to them as to who should be their delegates. This letter was filed.

A list of questions was received from headquarters, to be handed to each of the local candidates for the legislature, and to the candidates in the adjacent ridings. Upon these answers which are given these questions will depend the support which will officially be gives them by the council.

CHEWING GUM IN ENORMOUS QUANTIIES IS SOLD IN LONDON

Amount of Sales Is Almost Beyond Comprehension.

Enough Money Spent to Construct Permanent Pavements.

How the Gum Is Made—Interesting Process by Which the Chicle Becomes Ready for Market.

Enough chewing gum is sold from the factories in London each year to pay for an asphalt pavement from Talbot street to Adelaide street, on Queen's avenue; down Adelaide to Dufferin avenue, and back on that avenue to Richmond street. With the London gum that is consumed every twelve months you could construct a cement walk on one-seventh of all the blocks in this city, or 190 blocks. If the residents of King street from Wellington to Adelaide streets, could only corner that gum, they could pay for a bituminous pavement in front of their homes, and then have a litle matter of $52,000 to pay the butcher, baker and candlestick-maker. Or if they chose not to use their balance for this very excellent purpose, they might emulate Carnegie and buy books for the Public Library, and if they bought them at the same rate as the board did last year, it would take just 32 years to get rid of their surplus of cash. Or, rarer pleasure still, if this money were handed over to Police Magistrate Love, every man, woman and child in London might enjoy the extreme delight of taking one long, last, lingering stroll on the grass at Victoria Park, and there would be plenty of money to pay the $2 fine upon every one.

WHAT GUM IS MADE OF.

In spite of the fact that gum is on sale most everywhere, except, of course, the hardware stores and the Normal School, much of that consumed in London is an imported product. There is only one pretentious factory in London, and its output for local purposes is comparatively small.

The making of gum is a rather tedious process, and involves much painstaking labor. The raw material, chicle, from which gum is made, comes to London in immense loaves, not unlike bread in general appearance. Each of these loaves weighs from 12 to 20 pounds, and they are placed on the market in large bags, holding probably from 150 to 200 pounds each.

Chicle is the sap of the sapota tree, which flourishes in Mexico, and is prepared for the market much the same as resin. The sap is boiled down to the proper consistency for molding it into the loaf which reaches the factory. After the chicle has been received by the manufacturer his first step is to clean it thoroughly so as to remove all particles of sand, bark, dirt, and other foreign substances.

This is done by various secret processes. In many factories this process is still carried on by hand, but in others improved machinery has been invented for the purpose. After the chicle has been thoroughly cleaned—and this is one of the most delicate steps in the manufacture of gum—it it stowed away in trays and is allowed to cure and dry. The curing process consumes from two to three weeks, depending upon the condition of the raw material when it is received.

HOW CHEWING GUM IS MADE.

After the chicle has been properly seasoned the real work of gummaking begins. The material is taken from the storage barreis, and after being again hand-picked and granulated, is deposited in large kettles. There it is cooked under a fixed pressure, and is churned and stirred by heavy ladles operated by steam or electricity. While in these kettles powdered sugar and the desired flavors are added and the sticky mess is kept in motion by the paddles until it has been reduced to the proper consistency of working. When gum in the rough is taken from the steaming kettles it is not unlike unpulled taffy in appearance, and then for the first time it begins to assume shape and to look like gum.

The sticky material is fed into a roller machine, and, with the aid of flour, is rolled down to the thickness of an ordinary stick of gum. It comes out in sheets, which are carried away to a polishing and marking machine, in which the lines are deeply traced in the pliable stuff for the girls whose duty it is to break it up into sticks for packing.

This practically completes the process of manufacture. After the sheets have cooled and hardened for a brief period they are taken to the wrapping room, where the most tedious part of the work is done. The wrapping is all done by hand, the gum being put up by girls, whose nimble fingers handle on an average 5,000 sticks in a single day.

After the tiny sticks have been carefully wrapped they are made into packages, and when placed in pasteboard boxes are ready for the trade.

There may be some question as to what becomes of the enormous amount of gum consumed in London each year. If this point suggests itself to you look under some of the chairs in your sitting room, or under the lapel of your boy's coat.

AN EXCHANGE OF FAREWELLS

At the Maitland Street Baptist Church.

Members and Adherents Gather to Say Good-Bye to Rev. and Mrs. C. S. G. Boone.

The members and adherents of the Maitland Street Baptist Church assembled last evening to say good-bye and to bid God-speed to the pastor and his family, as they leave for their new field of labor in Leamington. The chapel was comfortably filled, and the proceedings were entirely informal in character.

Appropriate selections of music by the choir, a reading by Miss Sadie McNee, and short addresses by the chairman, the pastor and Mrs. Boone, followed by an ample repast, reading of the accompanying address, and the presentation of a purse and a beautiful bouquet of flowers to the pastor and his wife, made up a programme that was all that could be desired.

The utmost good fellowship prevailed, and Pastor Boone and his esteemed wife carry with them the warmest wishes of a host of friends, especially in the northern part of the city, where Mr. Boone's work was prosecuted during the past four and a half years.

Mr. W. J. Mill presided at the interesting gathering. Miss Carrie Leach, on behalf of the church and congregation presented the purse; Miss Edith Wyatt giving the bouquet, while Miss Mattie Coughtrey read the following address:

"London, Ont, May 13, 1902.

"To the Rev. and Mrs. C. S. G. Boone, London, Ont.:

"Dear Mr. and Mrs. Boone,—We, the members and congregation of the Maitland Street Baptist Church, have met together at this time for the purpose of spending a social evening with you, and to bid you farewell before you take your departure for a new field. We all realize this to be the last opportunity we shall have of meeting together with you; but as we look back over the four and a half years you have been with us, we thank God for giving us those so earnest and careful after our spiritual welfare. Under your teaching we have felt the power of the Holy Spirit leading us onward and onward to nobler and better lives, and making us to grow in grace and knowledge of our Lord and Master.

"You, too, have shared our joys and made them more joyful. In our trials you have comforted us and they have seemed easier to bear. You have mourned with us over our sorrows, and your kind words have lightened our burdens. Under this pastorate the church has thrived, which fact is plainly noticeable by the largely increased membership as well as in our present surroundings over that when you first came to us. We regret that the time has come when these glad ties of pastor and people must be broken, and would gladly it were otherwise; but we gratefully bow to the will of our Master, believing he alone has led you. We rejoice, however, that though separated in the flesh, we can yet be one in spirit, working for and waiting for the coming of our Saviour.

"We feel we cannot let this opportunity pass without in some tangible from showing our appreciation of your labor among us and the esteem in which we hold you. We therefore ask you to accept this purse as a slight token of the same, and as you go to your new field of labor you may know that those you leave behind will ever pray that God may shower upon you and yours his richest blessings, and that he may guide and direct you in your labors for him in giving you many souls for your hire."

The departing pastor made a very feeling reply, and after an exchange of farewells the interesting gathering broke up.

MUST EAT SUGAR

Why People Have a Strong Appetite That Way.

When food is properly digested and absorbed into the system, diabetes, dyspepsia and such diseases do not occur, and if, after these diseases have attacked the stomach and kidneys, the right kind of food is used, it will generally cure unless the disease has made too much progress.

A merchant in Young, O., E. D. Leedon, says: "Last August when I was in miserable health, I was visiting at my daughter's, up in Indiana. She prepared Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food for me, the first I ever tasted.

I had diabetes and dyspepsia with sour stomach from almost everything I ate. Of course the doctor kept me from eating sugar, but I had an almost ungovernable appetite for it. After I had been using Grape-Nuts every day for a short time my appetite for sugar was satisfied. I got the Grape Sugar from the food and it agreed with me perfectly.

"My dyspepsia left and I began to sleep well at night. I have kept up the use of Grape-Nuts and feel like a new man all over. I liked it so much and it agreed with me so well that I said nothing to the doctor for fear he might make me stop it as he had most everything I tried to eat, but one day I told him it was the food I was using that improved me so much. He asked what it was and when I told him 'Grape-Nuts' he said there was no better food made. You are at liberty to make use of any part of this letter you desire for I am more than grateful for the good the food has done me."

BIBLE SOCIETY MEMBERS MEET

The Past a Successful Year in the Society Work.

Stirring Addresses by Rev. Messrs. Bishop and Geggie—Election of Officers.

The annual meeting of the Western Ontario Bible Society took place last night in the Dundas Center Methodist Church. There was a fair attendance. The Bishop of Huron occupied the chair, and with him on the platform were Rev. G. J. Bishop, of the First Methodist Church; Rev. S. N. Geggie, of the Parkdale Presbyterian Church, Toronto; Rev. C. T. Scott, of the Dundas Center Church, and Rev. James Kennedy.

The directors' report showed a fairly successful year's work. Two new branches of the Bible Society have been organized, at Inwood and at Tilbury Center. Thirty-six copies of the Bible have been given to the Moravian Indian Mission during the year; twenty copies to the Protestant Orphans' Home, and three copies to poor families in the city. The issues for the year are 982 Bibles, 486 Testaments, and 61 portions of the scriptures.

The officers and committee for 1902 are as follows: President, Right Rev. Maurice S. Baldwin, D.D.; vice-presidents, Rev. George J. Bishop, Very Rev. Dean Innes, D.D., Rev. Jas. Kennedy, Rev. Dr. Johnston, Ven. Archdeacon Davis, D.D., Messrs. John Cameron, Thomas McCormick, George Robinson, V. Cronyn, A. Thompson, G. F. Jewell, Edward Towe; treasurer, Mr. John H. Adams; permanent secretary, Rev. James H. Orme; honorary secretaries, Mr. John Cameron and Rev. J. Kennedy; general committee, Revs. J. W. Holmes, W. H. Claris, C. T. Scott, B.A., J. H. Moorhouse, J. G. Stuart, B.A., C. C. Owen, B.A., A. J. MacGillivray, T. E. Harrison and Messrs. J. H. Adams, T. H. Luscombe, G. Rowntree, Thomas Kent, O. H. Talbot and John Holman.

The meeting was addressed by the Rev. Mr. Bishop and Rev. Mr. Geggie.

MR. BISHOP.

Mr. Bishop, who spoke first, dwelt upon the greatness and the pre-eminence of the Bible over all other books. All the Bible societies had during their existence published over 280,000,000 copies. The British and Foreign Bible Society alone had published 165,000,000 copies. The Bible, the speaker went on to state, had been issued to the number of 5,000,000 copies during the past year. How does this sound in the face of what Ingersoll said 25 years ago, namely, that the Bible was an exploded book and that in ten years it would cease to be read? It had been sent abroad in 373 different languages, and 100 revisions were now in progress. We were told that 130,000 copies of the Word of God had been bound in khaki and presented to the soldiers in South Africa. Since the persecutions in China the demand for the Bible has been marvelous. I think of the multitudes who have been awakened by its warnings and who have rejoiced in the salvation it proclaimed. What book had survived as this Book the flame and the flood? To what adverse criticisms had it not been subjected, and what forces had not been marshaled against it? Voltaire was dead; Tom Paine was dead, and Ingerwas dead, but Moses and the prophets still lived. How could this be accounted for? Only by the fact that God was in it and it was one of the trinity of forces employed by God for the uplifting of mankind.

In conclusion, the speaker stated that the income of the British and Foreign Bible Society for last year was $1,157,000, which enabled the organization to distribute something like 4,914,000 copies.

REV. A. N. GEGGIE.

Rev. A. N. Geggie, of Toronto, followed in a very vigorous address, saying that he was present to speak on behalf of the Bible Society, and that he realized that he had a big subject. If literature were to be tested by its prominence, what book would stand the test better than the Bible? No book was so deeply studied as the Book of God. It was in the hands of men before they realized what book it was. It did not come with a flourish of trumpets. It told its own stories, and its stories touched the hearts of men. It claimed an inspiration peculiar to itself. It stood pre-eminent in literature, for no other book could compare with it for fineness of feeling. It borrowed no light from the wisdom of men. A noteworthy feature is the fact that the British Soiety published the Bible without comment of any kind.

In the very heart of the immortal Shakespeare was the inspiration from the Bible. The Book was "God-breathed," for that was the original of the word inspiration. While we looked upon the Book as literature, it was something outside of literature. Here was the Book, but there was something lying in it that was not to be found in any other book. The Bible lived because it had that element in it. Very few books would stand being read a second or a third time without detracting from their interest; the Bible never became antiquated, because God lived in it, and even in translation it lost none of its power and meaning. It always maintained the same mighty spiritual force.

The Bishop of Huron, in closing the meeting, referred to the fact that the American Bible Society had ceased publishing because the secular press had taken up the work and was able to produce Bibles so much cheaper. The demand on the part of the people for the eternal word of God was unceasing. The Bible could only grow owing to the fact that it met tremendous wants—because it dealt with the great doctrines of the word of God which satisfied the yearning, troubled heart of man as nothing else could possibly do. The speaker went on to relate that one of the greatest blessings he had experienced, during 40 long years, that he had been trying to preach the living Christ, was when he sat by the bedside of the dying and delivered the message of comfort embodied in the cleansing power of Christ.

The audience, by vote of thanks, expressed their appreciation for the addresses of the evening, also for the services of the officers and members of the Western Ontario Bible Society, and the choir, and also thanked the trustees of the church for their kindness in permitting the meeting to be held in the Dundas Center Church.

The meeting closed with the singing of the Doxology.
