

A Glance at Life in Great Britain---Happenings in England, Ireland and Scotland Briefly Chronicled

LONDON GOES FISHING

Celebrated English Bishop After the Salmon in Ireland.

Mr. T. M. Kettle, M. P., for East Tyrone, was married in Dublin to Miss Mary Sheehy, daughter of Mr. David Sheehy, M. P.

The Hon. Lady Fraser, widow of the late General, the Hon. Sir David Macdonald Fraser, G. C. B., who died at her residence, the Grange, Castleknock, Co. Limerick, was in her eighty-sixth year.

Good sport with salmon and sea trout has been enjoyed by the Bishop of London, who has been fishing the River Eriff and its lakes, County Mayo, with Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Wanklyn, of Rastleigh.

At Dublin a man was sent for trial charged with the theft of £23 in gold. He had taken it out of the drawer of a bird cage in which the owner kept the money.

In a letter to the Belfast Union Jack Committee, Lord Meath says the British nation has lost much of its former discipline and many of those virtues which enabled it to found and maintain the empire, and has encouraged foreign nations to challenge its naval supremacy.

The Roman Catholic bishop of Rockhampton, Australia, who is at present on a visit to Ireland, speaking on the Irish in Australia, said that the St. Patrick's day celebrations in Sydney were perhaps the most successful held anywhere in the world. In Queensland, St. Patrick's day was always proclaimed a public holiday by the Government, while in Dr. Rubli's own city of Rockhampton, every shop was closed on St. Patrick's day. Irish music, songs and dances, too, were cultivated.

The report of the registrar-general for Ireland on the vital statistics for the year 1908, shows that the deaths from tuberculosis of all forms were 386 less than in 1907. The twenty-two principal Irish towns in 1908 also exhibited a decrease in tubercular mortality, the recorded death from this cause numbering 4,170, as contrasted with 4,418 in 1907, and 4,290 in 1906. The report of the local government board states that the question of prevalence of tubercular disease has been held public attention, and sanitary authorities as well as the individual members of the community are being influenced by the knowledge that tuberculosis is largely a preventable disease.

Considerable agitation was caused by the arrest of a man found inside the fortifications at Leenan Fort, on Lough Swilly. It appears that the attention of the military authorities was drawn to a stranger, who was apparently making sketches and notes within the innermost of the fort. He was immediately placed under arrest, conveyed to Clonmany police barracks and confined during the night under a military guard. The following morning he was released him, on hearing his explanation. The man stated that he was a police inspector from Berlin, and was at present on a tour, having already visited Manchester and Belfast. Curiously had impelled him to make a visit to the Leenan Fort.

WOODEN LEG GANDER

Follows Rest of Geese About Farm With Perfect Ease.

A gander, belonging to Mr. S. Barton, of Brampton, Cumberland, recently had one of its legs broken owing to being run over by a cart. The bird has been supplied with a wooden leg, and follows the rest of the geese about the farm with the greatest ease.

The Lowestoft herring drifter Pride recently landed at Grimby the results of one night's fishing, consisting of 200 crabs, or 200,000 herrings. On the market the catch realized £329, which is believed to be the highest price ever obtained for one night's fishing.

Signor Caruso, tired of the sombre aspect of evening dress, has ordered from a London tailor a suit of golden brown for his appearance at Plymouth. Signor Leoncavallo, the baritone of the tour, not to be outdone, has chosen a dress suit of dark purple.

The chancellor at Norwich consistory court in a case regarding the unauthorized removal of a stained glass window from Kilverstone Church, blamed a gentleman who has since died for giving orders for work to be done when a faculty had not been issued.

Messrs. Huxley's vaults, at the Eastgate, Chester, which were the subject of magisterial comment recently on account of their dusty condition, have just been cleaned. Cobwebs to the weight of one cwt. were removed by a vacuum dust removing engine in three days.

Capt. Winthrop, who died at Dover at the age of 88, entered the Royal Navy in 1825. He was present at the bombardment of St. Jean d'Arce in 1840, and also fought in New Zealand in 1845. His son, Lieut. Winthrop, was on board the Condor when she disappeared.

Frederick Hutchinson, for 44 years vicar of Blorton, near Stoke-on-Trent, has entered upon his hundredth year. While at Rotherhithe in his younger days he received public recognition for his courageous service at the time of a virulent cholera outbreak epidemic.

Archdeacon Lear, a prominent ecclesiastic in the Salisbury diocese, has celebrated his 86th birthday. Despite his age he is an active church worker. He has been a residential canon of Salisbury Cathedral for 47 years, and archdeacon of Sarum for 34 years.

Mrs. Elizabeth Passam, of Chilcote, near Swadincote, Burton-on-Trent, has celebrated her 100th birthday. Mrs. Passam's century was similarly celebrated there years ago owing to a mistake, which was discovered subsequently by the Rev. H. E. Worthington, rector of Scales.

John Thomas James, aged 50, a coachman, employed at Orchard House, Marshfield, Dorset, was attacked and stabbed by a cock fowl. He died at Bournemouth Hospital, and at the inquest it was shown that lockjaw set in owing to the cock's spur having been left in his thigh.

The Duke of Westminster has addressed a communication to his friends and neighbors in Chelsea inviting their support to a proposed pageant next year at Chester. Some 500 signatories have requested the mayor of Chester to call a public meeting next month in connection with the matter.

F. J. Mackay, of Beauchamp Hall, Leamington, was fined £2 and costs for the offence of riding his horse on the footpath. He declared that he had made a wager that he would ride into the Regent Hotel and round the billiard table, and having done it he was satisfied.

The Duke of Portland has intimated that he will allow the use of the ruins of Bolsover Castle for a range for the Bolsover Miniature Rifle Club. His grace is taking a keen interest in the welfare of the club, and he has promised to erect a temporary building for use as a club room during the winter.

In a case at Morpeth in which the proprietors of the Grand Hotel Hirst, and the White Swan Inn, Morpeth, were charged with allowing betting on their premises, it was stated that policemen disguised as pitmen and tramps visited both houses for the purpose of obtaining evidence. Both cases were dismissed.

Thousands of spectators lined the river banks when the Brazilian battleship Minas Geraes was taken from Elswick, where she was built, and Walker to complete her equipment. She was the largest battleship afloat, and is now little short of the improved Dreadnought type.

A horse belonging to a Bourne-mouth firm was having a bath in the sea at Alum Chine when it suddenly swam out, and had gone a mile, and half before a boat overtook it and headed it back to shore. When the animal landed after the three miles swim it seemed none the worse for the unwanted exercise.

SCOT GOLD FIELDS

The Scenes of the Rush To Be Reopened.

Though those first on the Scottish gold fields forty years ago declare the fields had a fair trial and never paid, Sutherland County Council has resolved to reopen Kildonan and Gaisgill, two places favored in the gold rush. The council has written to the Glasgow Corporation asking their back up in reference to the Glasgow tramways at Thornliebank, and there is some dread of trouble in the by and by. Meanwhile a building boom is on in the district, some of which may be attributable to the car development.

The court of referees of the House of Commons has decided that the Scottish railway companies should be heard in opposition to the Glasgow Corporation bill, particularly with regard to the proposal to make the tramways undertake part of the common good of the city.

A Scotch woman bowled out a London magistrate the other day with information that the inhabitants of Glasgow were, educationally and individually much ahead of London folks. She was granted a license to enable her to change to exhibit, in a music hall, their educational and individual attainments in the matter of dancing.

Offences by young people seem to be greatly on the increase in Mid Lanark, and of late big batches of children have been dealt with at the juvenile courts. On a recent Saturday no fewer than 54 were brought up at Hamilton to answer to charges of theft, destruction of growing crops and other forms of malicious mischief at schools and public works. The fines imposed ranged from 5s to 15s.

The new tower of the abbey of Inverness-shire, are the Marquis and Marchioness de Ganay. The castle dates from the early eighties; it occupies the site of a house, erected by the government of George II, which the Duke of Cumberland, Lord Lovat, who lost his head on Tower Hill. It was burned to the ground by order of the Duke of Cumberland.

The Trades' holiday in Greenock has been observed, when all the ship-building yards, engineering establishments and other working places were closed. During the day many excursions left the town, the largest being that of the Greenock Central Co-operative Society. The company, numbering fully 1,000, proceeded by special North British steamer to Craignish, thence being conveyed by train to Argyll.

Preparations will shortly commence for the celebration of the 500th anniversary of the foundation of St. Andrew's University, which occurs in 1913. At a recent meeting of the provisional committee, consisting of the Senate and University Court, it was agreed to arrange for a fitting celebration of the 500th anniversary of the foundation of the university, and, as the founding of the university gave a great impetus to higher education in Scotland, it was thought desirable to make the festival a measure national as well as academic.

With this end in view it was resolved to form a general committee, representing Scottish interests and sympathies. The Marquess of Tullibardine recently invited a representative body of working men of all shades of political opinion to visit the Atholl estates and judge whether the great Atholl deer forest was fit for any better purpose than that to which it is at present devoted.

Representatives were invited from Edinburgh, Glasgow, Crieff, Dundee and Aberdeenshire, and the men were selected by their own unions. Dundee refused to send a representative. The Marquess of Tullibardine submitted himself to examination, and answered a long series of questions, and the party later inspected the forest and district. The men were examined by the commissioners, who will shortly make public the results.

While fishing in Sir John Thord's lake in System Park, Lincs., a visitor named May hooked and landed an eel measuring three feet nine inches in length and nine inches in girth. It weighed five pounds.

Applications from all countries for British patents from Jan. 1 to July 31 states a parliamentary return just issued totalled 17,869, compared with 16,303 for the corresponding period of last year.

While the wife of a collier named Partington, of Summerhill, near Wrexham, was dressing her 4-month-old baby, an open safety pin dropped into its mouth and went down the throat. The child was taken to Wrexham infirmary, and the pin was located by means of X-rays in the stomach. An operation was performed and the pin removed, but the child collapsed and died.

A curious funeral practice was alluded to by the medical officer of health at the last meeting of the Warrimay rural district council. He said it was a common custom in the district to keep a body for some nine days before it was buried. The body was usually kept on show in the best parlor and seen by numbers of people, and in cases where deaths were due to infectious disease there was a certain way of spreading it.

The ancient Cornish game of hurling with a silver ball was witnessed by thousands of spectators at Newquay, where it is one of the most popular events of the summer season. The game took place on the wide expanse of smooth, firm sand for which Newquay is famous, visitors to the western half of the town opposing those in the east. Among this year's curlers was Mr. E. H. Lamb, M. P. for Rochester, who got into the thick of the fray.

The Cambrian Archaeological Association concluded their tour of Cheshire by paying a visit to Eaton Hall and its beautiful grounds and gardens recently. The previous evening Professor Newstead showed a paleolithic implement found at Chester last year during the excavations at the National Telephone Company's new offices, John Street, and which had been submitted to the British Museum authorities, and described by them as undoubtedly a paleolithic. Sir Henry Howarth said it was one of the oldest objects of human workmanship known to be found in these realms.

At the church of St. Michael de Buge, peched on the summit of Breton, the Bishop of Exeter recently dedicated a new peal of bells. Tradition has it that the church owes its erection in that elevated position—1,130 feet above the sea—to the vow of a merchant overtaken by a terrible storm while voyaging to England, that he would build a church on the spot if land sighted. This happened to be the lofty crest of Breton, and, accordingly, the church was built there. For some centuries the little church has served as a landmark over a wide area, and services are regularly held in it.

GIANT CHUCKER-OUT

An Irishman Six Feet Seven Offers Himself for Job.

The Earl and Countess of Wicklow, who are at Shelton Abbey, Co. Wicklow, will remain there for the rest of the summer.

An Irishman, who is six feet seven inches in height, and weighs 27 stone, is offering himself to theatre or public-house proprietors as a first-class chucker-out.

At the convention of the United Irish League, Mr. Arthur Lynch was chosen as Parliamentary candidate. Mr. Lynch has had a somewhat singular career. At a by-election in 1901 he was elected a member for Galway. He was abroad at the time, and could not take the oath as his seat in Parliament. As soon as he landed in England he was arrested on a charge of high treason for fighting on the Boer side in the South African war. He was tried in the King's Bench Division in London, in January, 1903, convicted, and sentenced to death. The sentence being afterwards commuted to penal servitude for life. On his conviction, the seat for Galway was, ipso facto, vacated. The imprisonment of Mr. Lynch lasted four years. The royal clemency was then extended to him, and he was released and restored to the full civic rights of which he now aims to take advantage by again becoming a member of Parliament.

A battery is to be erected at Kilroot Point, near Carrickfergus, for the protection of Belfast Lough and the valuable docks and shipping at that place. The battery will contain several 6-inch guns which, in conjunction with the guns of the newly erected Grey-point Battery, on the opposite shores of the Lough, will give a cross fire more effectively, both shores being within easy range of a six-inch gun. The mine scheme of the Lough is also to be improved.

Noticing two bathers in difficulties off Bundoran, a beachman named John Murray, instructed a boy to throw out a lifebelt, and then he swam out and seized Edward McCafferty, one of the men. The tide was too strong for him, but he got to the lifebelt and so reached the shore. He then entered the water again, diving several times to find the second man, Joseph Campbell, but without success. McCafferty did not show signs of life until artificial respiration had been tried for several hours.

A girl made a courageous attempt to save a man named Dennis McGrath, who was drowned in full view of a large crowd at Salthill, Co. Galway. McGrath and a companion named Burke, were boating when their craft capsized. Burke clung to the bottom of the boat, but McGrath could be seen struggling to keep himself afloat with an oar. Seeing that one of the men showed any tendency to go to the girl's aid, she cried, "If you won't save him, I'll try." She threw off her outer garments and dashed into the water. She was, however, beaten back by the waves, and McGrath became exhausted and sank.

NO ROYAL RESIDENCE

Report of One for Ireland Is Without Foundation.

The gross loss in the three years mentioned was £5,614, £28,948, and £20,037.

BUILDING IS FIRM IN THE CITIES

London's Increase for August 1909 Over August 1908 Was 68 Per Cent.

FALLING IN STRATFORD

Toronto Takes the Palm for the Biggest Increase—Plenty of Work on Hand.

With the beginning of the fall season at hand, there is every indication that the remarkable building progress made during the spring and summer months, will continue uninterrupted throughout the remainder of the year. In the east, west and central portions of the Dominion, plans have been formulated for a large number of important projects to be carried out within the immediate future, and unless adverse weather conditions come, been forging ahead since the beginning of the year; and as for Edmonton the loss may be explained by the fact that several important jobs were held up pending the outcome of certain labor troubles which gave promise of an early adjustment and have in all probability been settled by this time, so as to permit the work to proceed.

Aside from these four places, all cities in the list show the balance to be substantial in their favor. Ottawa's gain of 202 per cent, the biggest increase per cent tabulated for the month, places her in the premier position. Calgary lays claim to second honor by an advance of 188 per cent, while Berlin ascends to the third highest rung with an increase of 150 per cent, an amount which amply attests to the rapid manner in which this industrious city is progressing.

Toronto Takes Palm.

Toronto, however, bears the palm for the largest volume of business, permits having been issued for new to blight the present prospects—and the steady manner in which the season has set in would indicate otherwise—the declining months of 1909 will in all probability prove to be the greatest fall building period Canada has yet recorded.

As regards August, the last of the summer months, operations were exceedingly active. Comparative figures, as supplied by construction from seven of the twenty centres reporting, place the average gain for the month at 34 per cent, a fraction in excess of one-third more than was registered for the corresponding period of 1908. The west, with one exception, has fully recovered from the slump experienced in the preceding month; the losses noted, but four in number, are scattered; and the general situation as based on the returns, well balanced, strong and active.

Loss in Stratford.

The biggest loss for the month has fallen to the lot of Stratford, where a decline of 89 per cent has been recorded. Halifax is second in this respect, with a falling off of 81 per cent, while Port William and Edmonton lagged behind their figures for the corresponding period of last year to the extent of 4 per cent and 3 per cent respectively. This brief resume on the part of Fort William seems quite in view of the exceedingly strenuous manner in which she has
