

NO, ALGERNON, THE BASEBALL SUITS WE READ ABOUT ARE NOT THE KIND THE PLAYERS WEAR

HOWEVER, THEY ARE THE KIND THAT THE PLAYERS AND THE MAGNATES GET MIXED UP IN.

Mutt Must Have Been Afraid He'd Get Out of Practice

By "Bud" Fisher

LONDON HAS ANOTHER O. H. A. HOCKEY TEAM

Meeting Held Last Night and Officers Elected—Will Try To Enter Intermediate Series of the O. H. A.—Several Players Available.

At a meeting held in the Tecumseh House last night, a new intermediate O. H. A. club, known as the London Intermediate, was formed. The meeting was attended by many players, and the following officers were elected:

President—G. J. Chantler.
Vice-President—Basil Sterling.
Secretary—Jack Greer.
Treasurer—Chris. Hawkins.
Secretary-Hewitt, of the O. H. A., was communicated with, and as a result two representatives of the club left this morning for Toronto, where they will make application for entry to the intermediate series. They are desirous of entering the group containing Hamilton Tigers and Burlington.

Become a Dogcatcher to Learn Boxing Game

Earl Fisher, Cincinnati Boxer, Says One Gets More Practical Experience at Fighting This Way Than Any Other.

Earl Fisher, the Cincinnati boxer, explodes a new one in the matter of acquiring, proficiently, the many art of self-defence. Earl got his start by the method and, therefore, is presenting it, and vouching for his particular school.

Earl says it's a fierce grilling, warlike, and continually keeps one in hot water, thus developing the brain as well as the muscles. The fact is you've got to be a dog catcher in Earl's school. Mounted on a black wagon, with a net in hand, you are ready for school.

If the Yanks made Frank Chance what will they do to Wild Bill Donovan. Martin Delaney says every man should laugh ten minutes a day to keep in condition; how the dickens does he expect Joe Birmingham and Charlie Herzog to keep in condition?

Johnny Kling is considering coming back as catcher for the Cincinnati team; proving how easy it is to get free advertising for a billiard-room.

"You know I'm a good sticker," remarked Frank Farrell. If so he should have kept the club and played on it; that's all it needed.

HEADQUARTERS FOR STARR SKATES BROCK'S

The Sporting Goods Store of London.

The Seal That's Real 182 Dundas St.

Semi-ready Tailoring

ROBERT BURNS CIGAR.

Dye ken, mon, there's sic a smock as our Bobbie would ha' written a bit verse about! Aweel, the because ye've nae lit up a bonnie mild weed like this one, do so, forbye, Made in London by Vailens & Co. zxy is one that assists Nature. Regular and natural action of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels will keep you well and fit, and this action is promoted by

A True Tonic

BEECHAM'S PILLS

The Largest Sale of Any Medicine in the World. Sold everywhere. In boxes, 25 cents.

BARGAINS IN USED CARS

OVERLAND, 1913, 30 H.P. $500

OVERLAND $850

All fully equipped with extra tires.

A full line of accessories just in, at new garage.

J. C. BEEMER CHALMERS AND OVERLAND.

131-3 QUEEN'S AVENUE.

Hockey

LAST NIGHT'S SCORES.
O. H. A. Intermediate.
Seaford 10, Stratford 3.
O. H. A. Junior.
Marikade 4, Owen Sound 2.
Peterboro 3, Cobourg 2.
Exhibition Game.
Hull 5, Detroit 4.

TODAY'S GAMES.
Senior.
T. R. C. at St. Michael's.
Argonauts at Midland.
Intermediate.
Pictou at Oshawa.
Belleville at Peterboro.
Brampton at Markham.
Bolton at Weston.
Hamilton at Burlington.
Port Colborne at Welland.
Niagara Falls at Dunnville.
Elmira at Berlin.
Waterloo at Preston.
Ayr at Orumbo.
New Hamburg at St. Marys.
Foderich at Stratford.
Woodstock at Brantford.
Gravenhurst at Bracebridge.
Junior.
Frontenac at K. C. I.
Port Hope at St. Michael's.
Bowmanville at Whitby.
Newmarket at Aurora Lee.
Stayner at Collingwood.
Meaford at Barrie.
Victoria Harbor at Midland.
Orillia at Coldwater.
Northern League.
Senior.
Port Elgin at Southampton.

Western Teams Will Practice In Arena Tonight

Strong Team Will Be Taken to Sarnia For Game Saturday Night.

All the players of the University teams are urged to attend the practice at the arena tonight. The juniors, intermediates and Northern League seniors will all work out in turn on the ice, which is in good condition.

A strong team will be taken to Sarnia on Saturday for the first Northern League contest the University aggregation is to play this season. This game will be an important one, and every effort will be put forth to humble the Tunnel Town aggregation on its own stamping grounds. Wellington will play centre, and L'Heureux and Hall will likely be on the defence for this game. Arthur, McAvoy and Edwards will in all probability play the other positions on the forward line.

THE FLYWEIGHT CHAMP COMES BACK

Sid Smith, the former flyweight champion of the world, is the latest comeback in the boxing world. He has taken on weight, and is planning a campaign against the bantams.

Ingersoll, Jan. 7.—The curlers, as has been the case for a number of years, are showing much interest in the Seldon competition. This is the premier competition locally, and the rivalry has always been keen. The following ships have been appointed, and tomorrow night they will meet at the rink to select their rinks: C. H. Sumner, O. E. Robinson, F. G. Walley, R. B. Hunt, W. J. Peters, George W. Wood, Dr. Rogers, J. A. Henderson, M. J. Coniskey, T. W. Nagle, A. McDermid, Ken Rae, W. H. Beatty, Charles E. Rogers, Charles White and Thomas Seldon.

We've been reading about it so much we are not quite certain whether it was the Yankees or Col. Ruppert that was sold.

The Feds appear to be trying to get a corner on the Johnsons, but we observe they have not been bidding for Ban.

We would love to be present when Clark Griffith commences to kick about Walter Johnson jumping a contract and Unck Ben Shibe is present.

Cochran Houghton says the open football game is worthless unless merely as a variation, while Coach Zupke declares it is. Each points with pride to what his own team did, using the differing games. Score: On that argument, Harvard 24, Illinois 0.

Hurray! The National League is saved. The Giants have signed Art Frowne.

Germany Schaefer probably wants to join the Cubs just to prove that it is possible for a fellow to play on that team and still have a laugh left.

The news that the Federal League batters left left-handed pitchers hard last season will come as a welcome in formation to Joe Tinker, whose team occasionally got a basenit off one when he grew careless.

That a good left hook and a right cross will do more toward getting the money than a college education has been demonstrated by Charlie White, the Chicago lightweight.

Charlie's hook is one of the marvels of the pugilistic age and the money this apparently frail lad has made with it is cause for further wonderment. White doesn't know anything about calculus or higher mathematics except where gas receipts are concerned, but he surely does know how to time his punches to get his opponents on the canvas for the ten count.

This youngster has developed the famous left hook to a state not far short of perfection, and it has carried him from the ranks of the mediocre up to creditable showings against two champions—Willie Ritchie and Freddie Welsh.

Now that he possesses a powerful left he has set out to develop his right, and in his last few knockouts of opponents of varied calibre he has given the featherweights of the time a lesson in the use of the right hand.

Five or six years ago when White was a thin little kid around O'Connell's gym in Chicago, old Bill O'Connell, who ran the place, saw possibilities in him. But White at the time was primarily a budding boxer.

O'Connell saw that he needed a punch to get anywhere among the featherweights of the time, and he was a featherweight then. So the left hook was taught him, and now White is one boxer who has made the left hook very famous.

When he began, he started the hook about a foot and a half from his opponent's jaw. He "telegraphed" every time. It was soon apparent that he had to shorten it up or never succeed with it.

The prospect of shortening took several years. First it came down fifteen inches and twelve inches, then decreased finally to where it now is—six inches. Charlie doesn't start the hook until his foe's jaw is only six inches away from the mitt. This assures accuracy and gives just as much of a wallop as the old long-distance punch.

But having perfected and made famous the punch White found a new disadvantage. His opponents knew what he had before he stepped into the ring and Charlie found the jaw target plentifully padded with boxing gloves when his wallop came across. So he started hooking for the body and after a few smashes the other fellow usually dropped his mitts to guard his stomach and White—one of the quickest men to seize an opening in the boxing game—has ever been connected with the jaw for a knockout.

Because Freddie Welsh will have a tough time making 135 and White enters the ring at 131 pounds, friends of the latter are boasting him as the legitimate lightweight champion. If Charlie possesses the right to the honors, the fans will find it out as he has a busy schedule ahead.

The announcement that Charlie Somers is in financial straits explains the coyness of American League officials toward him for the last two years. How popular he was when he had it, and how unpopular he is now, is a story in itself.

That a good left hook and a right cross will do more toward getting the money than a college education has been demonstrated by Charlie White, the Chicago lightweight.

Charlie's hook is one of the marvels of the pugilistic age and the money this apparently frail lad has made with it is cause for further wonderment. White doesn't know anything about calculus or higher mathematics except where gas receipts are concerned, but he surely does know how to time his punches to get his opponents on the canvas for the ten count.

This youngster has developed the famous left hook to a state not far short of perfection, and it has carried him from the ranks of the mediocre up to creditable showings against two champions—Willie Ritchie and Freddie Welsh.

Now that he possesses a powerful left he has set out to develop his right, and in his last few knockouts of opponents of varied calibre he has given the featherweights of the time a lesson in the use of the right hand.

Five or six years ago when White was a thin little kid around O'Connell's gym in Chicago, old Bill O'Connell, who ran the place, saw possibilities in him. But White at the time was primarily a budding boxer.

O'Connell saw that he needed a punch to get anywhere among the featherweights of the time, and he was a featherweight then. So the left hook was taught him, and now White is one boxer who has made the left hook very famous.

When he began, he started the hook about a foot and a half from his opponent's jaw. He "telegraphed" every time. It was soon apparent that he had to shorten it up or never succeed with it.

The prospect of shortening took several years. First it came down fifteen inches and twelve inches, then decreased finally to where it now is—six inches. Charlie doesn't start the hook until his foe's jaw is only six inches away from the mitt. This assures accuracy and gives just as much of a wallop as the old long-distance punch.

But having perfected and made famous the punch White found a new disadvantage. His opponents knew what he had before he stepped into the ring and Charlie found the jaw target plentifully padded with boxing gloves when his wallop came across. So he started hooking for the body and after a few smashes the other fellow usually dropped his mitts to guard his stomach and White—one of the quickest men to seize an opening in the boxing game—has ever been connected with the jaw for a knockout.

Because Freddie Welsh will have a tough time making 135 and White enters the ring at 131 pounds, friends of the latter are boasting him as the legitimate lightweight champion. If Charlie possesses the right to the honors, the fans will find it out as he has a busy schedule ahead.

OUR SPORT PRIMER

OH SEE THE WONDERFUL STATUE. THAT IS NOT A STATUE, MY BOY. THAT IS A CHESS GAME. BUT WHY DO THE PLAYERS SIT SO RIGIDLY? THEY ARE THINKING. THE ONE WITH THE SUMMER SUIT IS ABOUT TO MOVE WHY DO THEY WEAR SUMMER CLOTHING IN WINTER? THAT IS BECAUSE THE GAME STARTED LAST AUGUST AND THEY WILL NOT FINISH IT UNTIL NEXT JUNE. WHICH ONE WILL WIN? NEITHER WILL WIN, MY SON. WHEN CHESS IS PROPERLY PLAYED EVERY GAME IS A DRAW.

Here's How Charlie White Puts Across That Famous Left Wing

BY LEFT HOOK.

That a good left hook and a right cross will do more toward getting the money than a college education has been demonstrated by Charlie White, the Chicago lightweight.

Charlie's hook is one of the marvels of the pugilistic age and the money this apparently frail lad has made with it is cause for further wonderment. White doesn't know anything about calculus or higher mathematics except where gas receipts are concerned, but he surely does know how to time his punches to get his opponents on the canvas for the ten count.

This youngster has developed the famous left hook to a state not far short of perfection, and it has carried him from the ranks of the mediocre up to creditable showings against two champions—Willie Ritchie and Freddie Welsh.

Now that he possesses a powerful left he has set out to develop his right, and in his last few knockouts of opponents of varied calibre he has given the featherweights of the time a lesson in the use of the right hand.

Five or six years ago when White was a thin little kid around O'Connell's gym in Chicago, old Bill O'Connell, who ran the place, saw possibilities in him. But White at the time was primarily a budding boxer.

O'Connell saw that he needed a punch to get anywhere among the featherweights of the time, and he was a featherweight then. So the left hook was taught him, and now White is one boxer who has made the left hook very famous.

When he began, he started the hook about a foot and a half from his opponent's jaw. He "telegraphed" every time. It was soon apparent that he had to shorten it up or never succeed with it.

The prospect of shortening took several years. First it came down fifteen inches and twelve inches, then decreased finally to where it now is—six inches. Charlie doesn't start the hook until his foe's jaw is only six inches away from the mitt. This assures accuracy and gives just as much of a wallop as the old long-distance punch.

But having perfected and made famous the punch White found a new disadvantage. His opponents knew what he had before he stepped into the ring and Charlie found the jaw target plentifully padded with boxing gloves when his wallop came across. So he started hooking for the body and after a few smashes the other fellow usually dropped his mitts to guard his stomach and White—one of the quickest men to seize an opening in the boxing game—has ever been connected with the jaw for a knockout.

Because Freddie Welsh will have a tough time making 135 and White enters the ring at 131 pounds, friends of the latter are boasting him as the legitimate lightweight champion. If Charlie possesses the right to the honors, the fans will find it out as he has a busy schedule ahead.

The announcement that Charlie Somers is in financial straits explains the coyness of American League officials toward him for the last two years. How popular he was when he had it, and how unpopular he is now, is a story in itself.

That a good left hook and a right cross will do more toward getting the money than a college education has been demonstrated by Charlie White, the Chicago lightweight.

Charlie's hook is one of the marvels of the pugilistic age and the money this apparently frail lad has made with it is cause for further wonderment. White doesn't know anything about calculus or higher mathematics except where gas receipts are concerned, but he surely does know how to time his punches to get his opponents on the canvas for the ten count.

This youngster has developed the famous left hook to a state not far short of perfection, and it has carried him from the ranks of the mediocre up to creditable showings against two champions—Willie Ritchie and Freddie Welsh.

Now that he possesses a powerful left he has set out to develop his right, and in his last few knockouts of opponents of varied calibre he has given the featherweights of the time a lesson in the use of the right hand.

Five or six years ago when White was a thin little kid around O'Connell's gym in Chicago, old Bill O'Connell, who ran the place, saw possibilities in him. But White at the time was primarily a budding boxer.

O'Connell saw that he needed a punch to get anywhere among the featherweights of the time, and he was a featherweight then. So the left hook was taught him, and now White is one boxer who has made the left hook very famous.

When he began, he started the hook about a foot and a half from his opponent's jaw. He "telegraphed" every time. It was soon apparent that he had to shorten it up or never succeed with it.

The prospect of shortening took several years. First it came down fifteen inches and twelve inches, then decreased finally to where it now is—six inches. Charlie doesn't start the hook until his foe's jaw is only six inches away from the mitt. This assures accuracy and gives just as much of a wallop as the old long-distance punch.

But having perfected and made famous the punch White found a new disadvantage. His opponents knew what he had before he stepped into the ring and Charlie found the jaw target plentifully padded with boxing gloves when his wallop came across. So he started hooking for the body and after a few smashes the other fellow usually dropped his mitts to guard his stomach and White—one of the quickest men to seize an opening in the boxing game—has ever been connected with the jaw for a knockout.

Because Freddie Welsh will have a tough time making 135 and White enters the ring at 131 pounds, friends of the latter are boasting him as the legitimate lightweight champion. If Charlie possesses the right to the honors, the fans will find it out as he has a busy schedule ahead.

The announcement that Charlie Somers is in financial straits explains the coyness of American League officials toward him for the last two years. How popular he was when he had it, and how unpopular he is now, is a story in itself.

That a good left hook and a right cross will do more toward getting the money than a college education has been demonstrated by Charlie White, the Chicago lightweight.

Charlie's hook is one of the marvels of the pugilistic age and the money this apparently frail lad has made with it is cause for further wonderment. White doesn't know anything about calculus or higher mathematics except where gas receipts are concerned, but he surely does know how to time his punches to get his opponents on the canvas for the ten count.

This youngster has developed the famous left hook to a state not far short of perfection, and it has carried him from the ranks of the mediocre up to creditable showings against two champions—Willie Ritchie and Freddie Welsh.

Now that he possesses a powerful left he has set out to develop his right, and in his last few knockouts of opponents of varied calibre he has given the featherweights of the time a lesson in the use of the right hand.

Five or six years ago when White was a thin little kid around O'Connell's gym in Chicago, old Bill O'Connell, who ran the place, saw possibilities in him. But White at the time was primarily a budding boxer.

O'Connell saw that he needed a punch to get anywhere among the featherweights of the time, and he was a featherweight then. So the left hook was taught him, and now White is one boxer who has made the left hook very famous.

When he began, he started the hook about a foot and a half from his opponent's jaw. He "telegraphed" every time. It was soon apparent that he had to shorten it up or never succeed with it.

The prospect of shortening took several years. First it came down fifteen inches and twelve inches, then decreased finally to where it now is—six inches. Charlie doesn't start the hook until his foe's jaw is only six inches away from the mitt. This assures accuracy and gives just as much of a wallop as the old long-distance punch.

But having perfected and made famous the punch White found a new disadvantage. His opponents knew what he had before he stepped into the ring and Charlie found the jaw target plentifully padded with boxing gloves when his wallop came across. So he started hooking for the body and after a few smashes the other fellow usually dropped his mitts to guard his stomach and White—one of the quickest men to seize an opening in the boxing game—has ever been connected with the jaw for a knockout.

Because Freddie Welsh will have a tough time making 135 and White enters the ring at 131 pounds, friends of the latter are boasting him as the legitimate lightweight champion. If Charlie possesses the right to the honors, the fans will find it out as he has a busy schedule ahead.

FEDS PLAN TO GIVE GAME A GOOD HOUSE-CLEANING

Joe Tinker Says Outlaws Are Trying To Eradicate the Businessmen From Baseball and Put in Sportsmen.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 7.—Affidavits in support of contentions made in the anti-trust suit recently filed in the United States court at Chicago by the Federal League, against so-called "organized" baseball, were to be made here at the Federal League conference, which began today. According to E. E. Gates, counsel for the new league, the independent's meeting was called in order to obtain additional evidence in substantiation of the general bill of complaint prepared by the Federal League against the older organizations. The conference is expected to continue for several days.

Joe Tinker, manager of the Chicago club, was the only man who attended who would talk of the meeting tonight. He said that the Federal League is planning to give baseball a "good housecleaning," and continued:

"We want to eradicate the 'businessmen' in the game, and put in no one who is not a sportsman. We are tired of having baseball run by two men, Ban Johnson and Garry Herrmann."

Those attending the conference include Mr. Gates, John M. Ward, former big league player; Ned Hanlon, Harry Goldman and Otto Knabe, of the Baltimore club; Joe Tinker, Rebel Oakes, manager of the Pittsburgh team; Lee Magee, recently appointed manager of the Brooklyn club; Pitcher Peritt and Ed Konetchy, claimed by the Pittsburgh Federals; Lloyd Rickert, secretary of the league; and Kenne Addington, counsel for the league. James A. Gilmore, president of the Federal League, is expected to come to Indianapolis tomorrow.

Harry Goldman said he thinks the Baltimore International club, will be sold soon. John Ward, who is attorney, refused to discuss the report that he is to assist the Federal League counsel in the anti-trust suit.

Ottawa Baseball Players Protected Hockey Players

Petrie Powers Took a Few Punches at Some Fans Who Started Riot at Cleveland Game.

Petrie Powers, the Ottawa catcher and outfielder, and Oscar Kohl, a pitcher, who was with the Ottawa team last spring, jumped to the rescue of the Ottawa College hockey players during the fracas at Cleveland Saturday night. Powers and Kohl are Cleveland boys, but on the strength of the baseball game, they were rooting for the College team. When the Cleveland trainer drew the bottle that caught Quail on the temple, the doctored outfielder and Kohl leaped onto the ice and went to grapple with Quail's cowardly assailant.

Petrie laid him low with a few well-directed uppercuts. Kohl was giving him a joyful pummeling when the crowd broke up the swardest. Catching sight of the trainer a few minutes later, Powers again trooped in his direction. When the two emerged from the fracas, the trainer looked as though he had been dragged through a flut. His face was cut and his nose wobbled amiably. The college players had to intervene to drag off the irate Petrie and his pal. Powers was once sparring partner of Johnny Kilbane, and is a swell two-handed fighter.

"I couldn't see him hit a guy from behind," Petrie explained when pulled out his prostrate opponent.

MARKDALE JUNIORS BEAT OWEN SOUND

Fast and Rough Game Ended 4 to 2 for Visitors.

PLAY WAS VERY EVEN

Owen Sound Came Strong at End, But Could Not Win.

OWEN SOUND, Jan. 7.—Markdale got the best of the Junior O. H. A. game here tonight, defeating the local Greys by a score of 4 to 2. The play was fast all through and inclined to the rougher times. The score at the end of the first period was 1 to 1. Owen Sound scored the first goal. Markdale scored again and followed this up by gaining two more goals in the second period before time was called. Owen Sound scored again, but were unable to overcome Markdale's lead. The play was more even than the score would indicate. The line-up was:

Owen Sound. Position. Markdale. Legate. goal. Staples. Butchart. left defence. Mercer. Bell. rover. Walden. Matchless. left wing. Burnside. Creighton. centre. Purvis. Pallister. right wing. H. A. Perham. Referee—Jack Dixon, of Toronto.

ROY CALDWELL AGAIN SIGNS WITH YANKEES

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Manager Donovan of the New York Yankees, gave Roy Caldwell to pitch for the New York Americans, inclining the rough season. The contract was signed last night.

Caldwell left the Yankees last August, shortly after which it was announced that the Buffalo club of the Federal League had secured his services for next season.

SIX MEMBERS OF CLUB HAND IN RESIGNATIONS

The following members of the executive of the Western University hockey club have handed in their resignations, which went into effect last night: President William Hadden; George Henry, chairman players' committee; Dave Atchison, treasurer; Dr. G. Jepson, secretary; Dr. G. MacNeill, chairman finance committee; W. H. Rhodes and Bert Perry.

PORT ELGIN PROTESTS CHESLEY'S VICTORY

PORT ELGIN, Jan. 7.—Port Elgin hockey team entered a formal protest today against Chesley taking the Bow man trophy. The grounds for protest are that Falkingham and Horsfield are both disqualified, having violated the residence rule.

HULL TEAM BROKE EVEN WITH DETROIT ARENAS

DETROIT, Jan. 7.—The Ottawa (Hull) hockey club got an even break in the second game of its series, when it defeated Detroit tonight, 5 to 4. The contest was very fast at times, with Ottawa, showing the best combination play. Detroit scored through the ability of its players to follow up, long-distance goal shooting being impossible with Theo guarding the visitors' goal.

ART ROSS SIGNS UP WITH OTTAWA TEAM

MONTREAL, Jan. 7.—Art Ross, the former Wanderer captain and defence player, has been signed by the Ottawa Hockey Club. The term of Ross' suspension by the National Hockey Association expires tomorrow, and he will likely figure on the Senators' line-up in their game on Saturday.

Lalonde has not as yet signed with the Canadiens, but Manager Kennedy expects to have his signature by this evening.

WHITE STAR DOMINION LINE

WINTER SAILINGS FROM PORTLAND & HALIFAX TO LIVERPOOL.

Two-Week Service. From Portland - Halifax S.S. Zealand, 12:00 Jan. 16 Jan. 17 S.S. Zealand, 12:00 Feb. 6 Feb. 7