

brained Scot, the first Bishop of Toronto. The Provincial Legislature, however, abolished the Theological Faculty, and Bishop Strachan in 1850 obtained an act of incorporation for, and proceeded to found, the University of Trinity College. In 1849 University College was established as a teaching body, distinct from the University of Toronto, the latter being confined to its degree-conferring powers. The corporation of the University consists of a Chancellor and Vice-Chancellor, together with the members of the Senate and of the Convocation. The government of University College is directed by a Council, composed of the President, the Vice-President, and the Professorial staff. The former president was a distinguished classicist and epigraphist; the present head has earned distinction in the departments of Ethnology, Archaeology, and General Literature. There are eight professors attached to the College, besides three or four lecturers and a Classical and a Mathematical tutor.

Facing the University, across a spacious lawn, is the School of Practical Science. Here, also, is the chief seat of Astronomical Observation for the Province. Language is inadequate to characterize the taste which sanctioned the erection of this glaring red building on such a site. It unspeakably outrages all the harmonies of the place. In
