

the reverent student may accept that result without any feeling that thereby he is putting dishonor upon the Scriptures or discrediting its authority as a revelation of religious truth. The only thing he is called upon to do is to revise his interpretation of the sacred records and restrain his deductions from them within somewhat narrower limits, as he has often had to do before. In the meantime, it may be some comfort to know that the scientific conclusion is much nearer the apparent Biblical statement than it was a generation ago. It is not inconceivable that the two may ultimately be found to coincide.
