

of reference and general work programmes of its three main committees: Committee on Commodities, Committee on Manufactures, and Committee on Invisibles and Financing Related to Trade. It will initiate preparations for the Second Conference on Trade and Development which is scheduled for 1966. The Board's agenda also includes an exchange of views on the implementation of the various recommendations of the First U.N. Conference on Trade and Development, Mr. Martin noted.

The Board consists of 55 elected members. Continuing representation is provided for Canada and other major trading nations. The Board is expected to meet twice a year.