

This is hardly the media's fault. In fact, we have cause to be grateful for what the media have already accomplished, against considerable odds, in defining ourselves in non-American terms. But there is vast room for improvement. Later in this report, we will recommend means by which the government and the media can make such improvement possible.