

Robert I. married Elizabeth, a daughter of Magnus and Anne, daughter of the King of Russia. They had a son, Robert II., who succeeded to the Earldom of Leicester, land and estates, turned a Canon in St. Mary's De Pratis where he served fifteen years and died, A.D. 1168.

His eldest son, Robert III., succeeded him as Earl of Leicester. In 1137 he married Petronilla, daughter of Lord Hinckley, Great High Steward of England, by whom he had three sons and two daughters.

The eldest became Earl of Leicester, the second Bishop of St. Andrews and Chancellor of Scotland. The third son, William De Bellomont, was surnamed De "Hamilton," A.D. 1173, from the place
