Challenge to Unbelief. A challenge to the unbeliever was thrown out by Rev. Dr. Hanson at Cooke's Church in the evening service. His discourse was one of masterly elouence, and the crowded congregation listened with intense interest. The text was found in 1 Corinthians xv., 14: "And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching in vain, and your faith is also vain."

"The resurrection depends on evi-dence which has been sifted and re-sifted," began Dr. Hanson. "If it be true, it demands the exertion of every atom of our strength, and if it be not true, we are the most miserable of Special stress was laid on the necessity of every individual walking con-tinually with Christ, as an unseen tinually with Christ, as an unseen companion, and of the necessity of constant communion in spirit with Him. Dr. Hanson commenced with the supposition that the story of the re-surrection was a farce, and the work of fakirs, and proceeded to demon-strate, if such were the case, the utter impossibility of it hanging together the way it has for all the centuries.

the way it has for all the centuries. Why did the supporters of imperial Rome, at that time the enemies of the Christian workers, not produce the crucified body of the Christ, with those unmistakable wound prints in hands and sides? Manifestly, the grave was found empty, and to this hour the un-believer stands dumb, when question-ed regarding the empty sepulchre of ed regarding the empty sepulchre of Joseph. The unbeliever explained the resurrection by stating that the disciples had stolen the body of their Lord away during the night. There was utter impossibility to such an argument since the Roman guard consisted of 16 men, who all knew that to be found sleepwho all knew that to be found sleep-ing while on guard meant immediate execution. The great change that came over the disciples after the re-surrection was noted. They were only human and had forsaken their Master only at the last hour. "How do you account for the change in these men, and for the existence of the New Testament penned by their hands?" was the query. The disciples hands?" was the query. The disciples had a three-fold assurance that their Master had arisen; they had seen Him, talked with Him and had touched Him. The familiarity and close relationship of the disciples would have foiled any impersonation.

BEER FROM WATER TAP

That's What Inspector Cuddy Found in Week-end Clean Up.

An ingenious method of dispensing liquor without a license was disclosed to the police Saturday night, when they raided a place occupied by Geo. Fletcher, 100 Victoria-lane. Under a stairway they found pipes connecting with a water tap, and, running down into the cellar, they were attached to beer kegs, nicely iced. There was an attachment on the water pipes that would shut off the water and let the beer flow.

attachment on the water pipes that would shut off the water and let the beer flow. It was the first place struck by Inspector Cuddy and P.C.'s Black and Wilson in an itinerary that finally rounded up enough liquid to stock up a well-patronized hotel. At 8.30 they got from Fletcher's place 35 bottles of beer, three kegs of lager and two bottles of whiskey. At 10 p.m. they selzed 29 bottles and four kegs of beer from Mrs. Collel, 124 Elm-street. At midnight they raked in 84 bottles of beer at Joseph Spiegal's place, 75 Elizabeth-street. Earlier in the night they captured two bottles of whiskey, which they allege was being retailed by Mrs. Bornstein at 93 Agnes-street. Upon searching a shed in the rear they found a large quantity of beer. The last-named person has faced a charge of illegal selling be-fore.

DETERMINED TO SUICIDE.

Church unity was not of to-day or lor. The Faulkner Challenge Cup was won by T. Mitchell by a narrow mar-gin. The scores were all good consid-ering the gale that was blowing across the ranges. For 62 years the Evangelical Alliance had been organ-ized to make proparation for a visible unic n. Churchmen and nonconform-ing the gale that was blowing across its could unite on the great funda-mental truths. They believed in the supremacy of God's word, the delty of the Lord Jesus, and the sufficiency of His sacrifice on the cross; that the two sacraments necessary to salvation. The Bislop of Lundon, at Haliax recently, had said nonconformists and At gilcans were agreed on nine-tenths of the truths. They should ally to defend the church from the attacks of rationalistic writers. The alliance was not only for truth, but for work, as shown by the laymen's missionary and volunteer movements.

Christian ministry was instituted by God Himself, and that there were bu
