

WILLIAMS PIANOS

EIGHTEENTH YEAR

STILL ANOTHER BLAZE.

The Central Prison Again a Scene of Excitement.

INDUSTRIAL WORKS BADLY DAMAGED.

Loss in the Binder Twine and Broom Factories About $35,000.

Promptitude of the Guards Prevents a Panic Among the Prisoners—Men of Stanley Barracks Under Arms During the Work of Destruction to Prevent Convicts Escaping—It's the Old Story of No Water Pressure Owing to Lack of Mains—Why the Engine Boustead Did Not Work—What the Prison Authorities Say as to the Origin.

Shortly after 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon fire broke out in the industrial part of the Central Prison, and at first it looked as if it would be one of the largest fires ever seen in Toronto. Guard Gallivan was on patrol at the sentry box at the southwest corner of the grounds and was first to see the fire coming from second storey window in the southeast corner of the broom factory. He gave the alarm, and one of the sergeants pulled the box siren, and a general alarm. The whole fire brigade were called to the scene, but by the time the first wagon reached the spot the flames had made good headway.

Looking After the Prisoners. The fire started in the drying room of the broom factory, where there were about 90 convicts at work and this building was completely destroyed. There were several branches of hose started at work on the fire, but the pressure was so low that the six-inch hose was used. The water was pumped from the broom factory in the yard at the west end of the grounds. At first he went round among the conservatories on the south of the building. These were totally destroyed, the heat cracking the glass and withering the plants.

The Binder Twine Factory Ablaze. The next place to be set on fire was the binder twine factory on the east side of the broom factory. This was caused by a spark lodging on the wooden framework of the large skylight in the roof. This amount to three-quarters of an hour before the firemen saw it, and when they discovered it several branches of the hose were taken from the broom factory and turned on it, but the pressure was not sufficient to carry the water to the top of the building.

The Water Tower Ajar. After some delay the water tower was started at work, but was not much better than the hose, as there was only one engine to be attached to it. The others were working at different parts of the grounds and work at one engine would not send the water over the building. Before proper pressure could be put on part of the skylight, which can be nearly the whole of the roof. It can be seen that the chief ordered the men to get to work from the inside and four or five branches were turned on from the inside. Being taken in through the second storey window in the broom factory the fire was wholly out in this building.

Mats Building Enlared. All the industrial buildings are stationed at the extreme west end of the grounds, and entirely away from the main structure, so there was really no danger of the fire reaching it in any way, the binder twine factory being the nearest, and the fire was nearly all on the roof of the broom factory, and west of that is the lumber yard and conservatories, and the fire was confined to this part of the grounds.

In the lumber yard were three fat cats owned by the G.P.R., and they were totally destroyed, along with box car no. 15871, owned by the Grand Trunk. There were four other G.P.R. cars in the yard at the time, but one of the company's yardmen got there in time to have them taken out.

Massey-Harris Works in Danger. The sparks from the burning lumber started on one of the buildings of the Massey-Harris Company, setting fire to the roof, but doing little or no damage, as a spray was turned on it before it got any head. Then the fence outside the brick wall, between the road and the market garden, took fire, and was allowed to burn down, as there were no buildings near it, and the hose was needed inside.

After the fire was put out at the Massey-Harris building their brigade of five men and the chief were sent over to the prison, and rendered great assistance to the fire department.

To Prevent Escapes. When it was learned at Stanley Barracks that the prison was on fire, Col. Otter ordered the men out under arms, and kept them in readiness in case of prisoners escaping. The military were held in readiness for over an hour, then were dismissed.

When the fire started Sergt. White and P.C. Walker (33) were just outside the walls, and hearing of the fire called the wagon and guarded the large gate at the entrance to the prison, keeping the crowd from getting inside. All the roofs of the buildings near the scene of the fire were crowded with people anxious to see the scene, and the police force had their hands

DUKE OF PORTLAND

Has Caused Joy in Chicago by Announcing That He Will Send Entries to the Horse Show.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—A tiny, square misfit, which nestles in John A. Logan's inside pocket, brought with it jubilation all out of proportion to its size. It being from the private secretary of the Hon. W. J. A. C. J. Cavendish-Bentwick, Duke of Portland, announcing his intention of having several entries at the Horse Show in November in Chicago.

This is believed to be the first occasion at which any Englishman of title has entered any of the horse shows in America. New York not excepted. The contest on Portland's part is, therefore, hailed with delight by those who are struggling every nerve to make this the greatest horse show ever held.

A FIREBUG'S WORK.

The Burning of Joseph Newman's Baby at Kingston Was Due to Incendiarism. Kingston, Ont., Oct. 4.—The Newmans, Joseph and William, so severely burned in the fire of Saturday last, are both doing nicely in the hospital. Joseph's burns have caused him great agony, and this has been accentuated by the grief he feels over the burning to death of his baby. It is quite clear that the fire was of incendiary origin. Mrs. Perry, one of the Newmans' housemaids, was charged with the crime of setting a fire to a drink. As she looked out she saw a man scrambling over a fence near to Pipe's ice house. She thought he was employed by the ice man and paid no further attention. However, she thought he was a man of some means, and, fanned by a furious gale, was blowing up the row of houses adjacent to it.

A SENSATION IN COURT

Over the John Eaton Company Insurance Case.

STARTLING STATEMENT BY MR. OSLER,

Which, When Challenged, Was Backed Up by Two Affidavits.

Counsel for the Insurance Companies Sued by the Bank of Toronto Boldly Says That There Were Already Over $60,000 of Duplications Discovered in the Stock Sheets on Which the John Eaton Company Base Their Claim—Expert Accountant Nefl Says That There Are the Lists of Twenty Departments Yet to Examine—The Trial Postponed.

The suit of the Bank of Toronto against the insurance companies which refuse to pay the insurance on the John Eaton stock destroyed by fire on May 20) developed a sensation in the Civil Assize Court yesterday. R. B. Osler, Q.C., appeared for the companies, and Wallace Nesbitt for the Bank of Toronto, while a big array of legal talent crowded into the court room to watch developments.

Mr. Osler asked for an adjournment on the ground that his clients had not had time to complete the examination of the John Eaton Company's books, and this was opposed by Mr. Wallace Nesbitt, who stated that they had had ample time.

Mr. Osler's Sensational Statement. Then Mr. Osler created a sensation by a statement which put in words the rumors which have been floating about since the occurrence of the fire. He said that his clients could show that in the stock sheets, prepared on Aug. 1, 1896, upon which the John Eaton Co. based their claim, that on the day of the fire their stock was valued at $207,000, there were repetitions and duplications amounting to over $60,000. He was convinced that if the time were given him this amount could be doubled. The appraisers had, during their examination of the books, overlooked this fact. Hence the slow progress they had made. It was only when an expert had had the books put into his hands that this fact had been discovered. Mr. Osler also stated that one of the John Eaton Co.'s experts, who was a material witness, was sick in the hospital.

Mr. Nesbitt's Challenge. Mr. Wallace Nesbitt challenged Mr. Osler to make this statement upon his own responsibility, and said that the expert mentioned was merely drunk.

It Was Not True. The Cavendish Sporting Expedition in East Africa Was Not Succeeded. London, Oct. 4.—A letter was received here to-day from Kikuyu, British East Africa, which disposes of the story received at Rome from Belidri, saying that the Cavendish sporting expedition, which left Berbera, East Africa, last year, arriving at Lugh, Somaliland, about the middle of November, proceeding thence towards Lake Rudolph, had been attacked by a band of Amharas, who murdered all the members of the expedition, consisting of two Englishmen and 90 Ascarias.
