WHERE HALIFAX SETS EXAMPLE FOR ST. JOHN

(Halifax Recorder)

The Civic Improvement League draws the attention of the citizens to the way in which the front of the city hall has been brightened by the use of window boxes. Many, perhaps, have not observed this, if so it will be worth their while to go into the Parade some day soon and observe the effect of this simple means of beautification. The civic authorities are setting an example in this, that might well be copied by every resident. If the reader should be in Halifax street, if any time and has not seen the front of the Queen Hotel recently, it would be worth while to walk along the west side of the street to observe the beautiful effect of the window gardens at that place. The same thing may be seen at the King Edward Hotel, the Revere House and some private dwellings.

At the league will endeavor to encourage window gardens next year, and will probably offer special prizes for the best window boxes, residents should begin to take an interest in the matter now, make inquiries and be ready to have window boxes started for next summer.

READY REPLY.
Quite recently a warship of the Atlantic fleet found it necessary to call for a few hours at a military port on the coast of Ireland. Tommy Atkins, meeting a full-bearded Irish tar in the street a couple of hours later, said: Pat, when are you going to place your whiskers on the reserve list? When you place your tongue on the civil list, was the Irish sailor's reply.

Lots of people who want to be forgiven don't want to be forgotten.

Fashion Hints for Times Readers

A TYPICAL SUMMER GIRL OF 1910

The fondled frock of this season is charmingly cool and simple, yet has a dash and smartness of its own. With this little frock, made without a lining and trimmed with plain colored satin, with cord drops and with plaited fringe, the summer girl wears a dark leather belt of extravagant width and a picture hat, either immensely large with sweeping feathers, or audaciously small and close to the hair. The graceful hat pictured is of straw in the color of the frock and pattern and the "whirling" coque feather is in a darker tone of the same shade. Beneath the wide hat-brim, one can see the brand new French hair arrangement—a cabouchon of flat braids over each ear.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

"I HAVE half a dozen invitations to visit different friends of mine this summer—two or three of them people I'm very fond of, too," said the pretty little stenographer lady who was curled up in my Gloucester hammock, "and yet I'm going to take my hard earned money and go to a hotel for a two weeks' vacation."

"Why?" in answer to the expected question on my part, "because I'm tired, and I know it will rest me just about twice as much as visiting even people I love. There's no two ways about it—visiting, even the nicest people, is a strain."

"Now don't think I'm ungrateful, Ruthie," surging up on her elbow in the enthusiasm of her subject, "because, really, I'm not. And don't think I don't know what I'm talking about, because I do. I've done a good deal of visiting at one time or another, and at some very pleasant places, too, and it's all well when you have plenty of money to spare, but when you want a complete rest—nervous and body and soul—thank you, no."

"Let me tell you about last year."

"I went to see one of my young married friends, as nice and jolly a girl as ever lived and a lovely home, but—well, you don't know who she is and never will, so what's the harm in telling you why I'm going to a hotel this year?"

"In the first place she has three small children, who wake up a little before the birds, I should say, and consequently they all have to have breakfast by seven o'clock. Rita said at six every morning—half an hour earlier than I am the rest of the year."

Because of her husband's business hours she has to have a late and hearty dinner at half past two in the afternoon, and supper at about eight. The peculiar hours and the richness of the food Rita serves knocked my digestion all out. Mind you, I'm not complaining; I'm just showing you why fitting in with the routine of other people's households—as a visitor has to do, of course—isn't always the most restful thing."

"Then Rita is one of those people who will work their fingers off trying to make things nice for you, but who are hurt unless you respond by keeping in a perfect frenzy of gratitude and enthusiasm over their efforts. Now it may sound horrid, Ruth, but I don't know of anything more wearing than being continually obliged to appear pleased and grateful. You may feel very much so, but if you feel that you must show it all the time, it makes you uncomfortable and constrained. I think that's one of the best things about a paid-for visit. You don't feel obliged to look delighted all the time. Festively, my delighted muscles were so overworked last year that I hardly smiled for a month afterwards."

"I have a great objection to coming home just the day before I must go back to work, so I wanted to leave two or three days before the two weeks were up, but Rita is one of those people who overdo a hospitable urgency to prolong your visit into an iron-bound insistence that you shall stay longer, so I had to give that up."

"Actually, Ruth, I had been looking forward to those two weeks all the year, and yet I was more relieved than anything else when it was over."

"Why don't you say something in some of your talks about the evils of visiting, Ruthie? Tell working girls that if they really want to get a thorough rest and change, they can't afford to try to fit themselves into someone's else routine."

"I will, I said."

But I thought I'd let her, instead.

Why will a woman try to put a No. 6 foot in a No. 4 shoe, then proceed to decorate the other extremity of her person with a hat the size of a cart wheel?

SUSSEX MAN PIONEER IN GOOD WORK

C.T. White Has Striking Printed Notices on Trees on His Properties Urging to Conservation of the Forests

(Sussex Record.)

There are more ways than one to build up New Brunswick. Publicity does much to assist and it encourages many who might otherwise take no interest in this important matter of doing something for their native province, but a lot can be done without first or last, to help the province and this is true of the lumber industry than of any other.

The lumber interests of New Brunswick are most important and their value increases with time. It is now recognized by almost everybody that forest destruction is not to be tolerated and each year greater care is being exercised in the protection of the forest wealth of Canada. A few days ago C.T. White & Son added to their already extensive holdings a large lumber property in Albert and that reminds us that for years Charles T. White has been a pioneer of forest conservation. He has always studiously encouraged his employees to exercise every care in saving lumber growth and in this, he has set an example that may well be followed, not only by lumbermen, but the general public.

The properties controlled by Mr. White, personally, and those operated by himself and his son, Garfield, under the firm name of C.T. White & Son, are among the best in the Maritime Provinces. At least one of the holdings was declared by some of the lumbering ones to be valuable when Mr. White, Sr., acquired it. Nevertheless the limit has been lumbered for over two decades and is now worth far more money and carries more large trees than at any time since an axe was first put into it. This desirable result has been brought about by care. No trees have been ruthlessly destroyed and fires have been watched closely. The men in the employ of the concern have been taught to regard the protection of the trees as a duty they owe to themselves, their children and their children's children, and so they are, as it were, interested partners in the operation and have thus been for years wedded to conservation in its most practical form.

The Messrs. White do not talk conservation. They get right down to the lumbermen and speak to them in their own language, as illustrated by a printed notice that is posted from one end of the White properties to the other. Here it is:

"DANGER."
"Save every young spruce. He'll be there for you or your boys to cut in a few years."
"Do not destroy the lumber of the future by careless cutting now."

"It is every one's interest to protect the smallest spruce or fir."
"We will be thankful for the help of every man in the cause of Careful Lumbering."

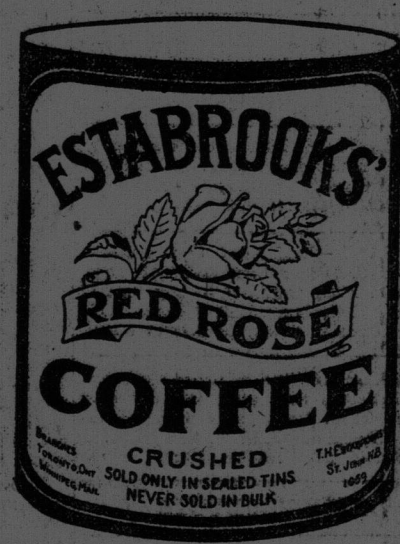

"Think it Over Seriously."
You see, there is no threat suggested in this. It is an appeal to the common sense and business interests of the lumberman. Everywhere he goes in the course of his daily task, he is confronted by a polite request which goes right home. His co-operation is asked for and the protection of the forest becomes to him second nature. The results of this appeal have been good. But its terms may well be taken to heart by every New Brunswick who has an interest in his province. "Save every young spruce. He'll be there for you or your boys," is a sentiment that interests more than the man who fells the trees. It is a direct appeal to men of every class. "He'll be there for you or your boys."

means the city man as well as the resident of the country and the lumberman. More operators would do well to follow the example set by Messrs. White and point out in a similar homely way, that the saving of the forests is of interest to "you or your boys."

TECHNICAL EDUCATION IN NOVA SCOTIA

(Halifax Recorder.)
Principal Sexton has returned after his trip through Cape Breton and the industrial districts of Nova Scotia, including Amherst and Springhill. He referred to his visit as most gratifying, in giving evidence that the large majority in those districts believe very strongly in the merits of technical education. The only complaint, said he, was that we had not spent enough money in providing apparatus to illustrate the chemical and physical phenomena in teaching mining and engineering in the schools. Employers of labor were all in favor of night schools. Instead of laying too much work upon the boy, the night school was a boon and was of incalculable benefit in keeping him off the streets at night. The consensus of opinion was to the effect that the brightest boys attended these night schools. The royal commission was very favorably impressed with what Nova Scotia has done to establish a full system of technical education, which, when it is completely rounded out, will meet the needs of the people.

One of the chief results the college hopes to achieve through the commission is that the government will grant money to be spent on technical education. Principal Sexton thought the commission was one of the most important in Canada, and he considered that its results will be very far-reaching.
