

As twilight dawns on objects half defined,
Thick fancies throng the vistas of my mind :
Scenes from the shade emerge, with legends rife,
And characters, as statues, start to life :
Their histories transpire, their fates impend,
Their passions kindle, principles contend,
Arms glisten, voices plead for right or wrong—
And lo ! a mystery and a myth in song.

