Editor's Talk

MR. WHITNEY'S description of his hunting trip in Ellesmere Land is continued in this issue. Some more of his wonderful photographs are also reproduced. Four more articles from the pen of this versatile hunter will appear in later issues, all of which will be fully illustrated.

NOTHING could be more interesting than the present struggle between the supporters of a new Welland Canal and those who favour the Georgian Bay Canal. The history of these two undertakings and the arguments pro and con are well summarised in this issue by Mr. Norman Patterson. The subject has proved too large to be adequately dealt with in one article and a second will appear next week. Every person interested in the price of Western grain, and that includes nearly all the business men of Canada as well as the farmers of the Prairie Provinces, will find these articles very valuable. The problem is a national one, and the expenditure is large, therefore the question should receive the most careful attention.

HIS week we present a page of the latest portraits of the statesmen who are taking a prominent part in the fierce election campaign now being waged in Great Britain. We also present an excellent article from our British correspondent, which in a calm and judicial manner summarises the position of the House of Lords in the present controversy. Other articles and illustrations, equally illuminating, will appear in later issues.

THE growing popularity of the advertising columns of the "Canadian Courier" is clearly shown by the following comparison of the number of columns carried in December, 1908, and December, 1909:
