

But what it does mean is that there is more room in us for Christ ; and our conception of Christ has grown along with it, in the providence of God, to show that there is in Him a greatness which corresponds to our greatness. And it is, as I said, when we permit ourselves to be invaded and wholly invested by the Spirit of Christ that we achieve real creative personality. Until then we shall remain a race of pygmies, small, ineffectual molecules of life.

He who would attain to the full stature of his manhood must needs let the great Christ in.