SHAKING HANDS.

This Phase of Etiquette.

When to shake hands is a subject bich depends somewhat on circumtances, yet a few general rules may be iven. When a man is introduced to woman she does not shake hands ith him unless he is decidedly elderly distinguished. If he is the husband brother of the woman presenting im it is natural to receive him cor-dially by shaking hands, but it is not form to do so if he is a mere acquaint-

When, however, a young girl is presented by a friend to a married woman the latter shakes hands with her, but the girl must not make the first advance.

first advance.

Men shake hands when introduced to each other as an expression of good will. When leaving an entertainment a man shakes hands with the hostess, and he may do so with friends who are near, but he must not go about shaking hands generally.

Disaster usually follows in the wake of too much self-assertion.

A FRENCH TOY.

The Coin and Bobechon Trick Is In teresting and Amusing.

The bobechon is a little toy, easily constructed, with which a very interesting game may be played. It comes to us from France, where it is much in a contract of the vogue, and, while a child can play it, it is often indulged in by grownups, for, though simple, it requires some skill. That, however, is soon acquired with practice.

To prepare the bobechon make a tight roll of a piece of fiannel or of heavy cloth. The roll should be about three inches long and half an inch in diameter. To keep it in shape wind a string around it tightly from one end to the other.

Now take a piece of fur and cut a circular piece out of it an inch and a half in diameter. If you have not the fur, several thicknesses of cloth may be sewn together tightiy, making a disk of the given diameter. Sew the roll of finnel to the center of the disk. so that it will be supported in an up-right position, the disk making a cir-cular base on which the roll stands. This will complete the bobechon, and the illustration will show you how it-looks. Now for the same.

looks. Now for the game. Stand the bobechen upright in the center of an ordinary dinner plate and place on top of the flannel roll a small place on top of the Hannel roll a small coin. Now have a fexible cane or rod or a piece of rattan, and with the rod remove the bobechon and the coin from the plate so that neither will fall into the plate. The coin need not remain on the bobechon, but both must fall absolutely clear of the plate. solutely clear of the plate.

That is your problem. It sounds easy, but try it. The players agree beforehand on the number of trials each shall have, and number of trials each shall have, and seme one keeps score. Each plays in turn, taking one trial at a time, and the first one takes his second trial after all have had their first, and so on, until the number of trials agreed upon has been had by each.

has been had by each.

Whoever succeeds the most times is the winner, and if a prize be offered zest will be added to the game. To remove the bobechon and the cois is not as easy as it seems. If you place the rod near the base and alide bobedon, and coin to the sloping edge and these give a push, the coin will fail of into the plate, even if the bobedon is pushed clear of it.

pushed clear of it.

There is one certain way to do it—press the end of the flexible rod on the farther edge of the plate so that it curves downward. The curve of the rod will touch the bobechon just where the rell is sewn to the disk, pressing down on the base and against the upright roll, as shown in the illustration. Now slowly move the bobechon, with the coin on it, to the slope of the plate, and then, with a peculiar twist of the rod, which you will learn with practice, you may remove both bobechon

This little toy is well worth making, for you will find that it will amuse every one who comes to see you.—New York Mail.

The Obedient Boy. A little boy was sailing a boat with a playmate a good deal larger than he

The boat had sailed a good way out in the pond, and the big boy said: "Go in in, Jim, and get her. It isn't over your ankles, and I've been in every time."

"I daren't," said Jim. "I'll carry her all the way home for you, but I can't go in there. She told me I mustn't dare

"Who's she?" "My mother," replied Jim rather

"Your mother! Why, I thought she was dead," said the big boy.

"That was before she died. Eddle and I used to come here and sail our boats, and she never let us come unless we had strings enough to haul in with. I ain't afraid—you know I'm not—only she did not want me to, and I can't do it."

Wasn't that a beautiful spirit that made little Jim obedient to his mother even after she was dead?—Selected.

Perfeits.

Of course all of you boys and girls know what "fine or superfine" means? If any one of you does not, ask somebody quick to tell you!

But we are all of us always "hard up" for good forfeits. So we will give you a couple of forfeits that are recommended by the "Book of Indoor and Outdoor Games;"

A bit of paper is pinned to a curtain or portiere, and then blindfolding the culprit, he is requested to remove it. Forfeits.

Three Kinds of Dressers. A clever woman has summed up her sex who succeed in the art of dress in three classes this wise: The good dress-ers, the clever dressers and the intellectual dressers, but of these last there is a hopeless minority. Intellectual dressing depends on one's power of imagination, and of this inward and spiritual grace there is a sad deficiency. The lady should add to this the fat pocketbook, which alone makes it pos-sible to employ the "dress artist" to think for her client and keep her in the intellectual path.—Beston Herald.

A Great Painter's Beginning. Sir Thomas Lawrence was one of the great portrait painters in England. the great portrait painters in England. His parents were poor, his father being a country innkeeper. One day Lord Shaftesbury's father and mother stopped at the inn, having their younger son, the future lord, with them. In conversation the innkeeper spoke of the genius of his boy in drawing and wished them to test it by a picture of their son. They assented, thinking to gratify a father's pride, but not looking for any evidence of superior talent. The boy came in modestly, with chalk and paper, and in a few minutes had and paper, and in a few minutes had drawn a picture of their son on which the parents looked with wonder. They recognized the genius and the promise of future greatness and befriended the young artist, giving him the help needed to develop his wonderful gift.

This strange incident of a great naval battle was told by Commissioner McGiffin of one of the Chinese warships in the battle of the Yalu between McGinn of the Yalu between ships in the battle of the Yalu between the Chinese and Japanese fleets in 1894: "About this time the Chin Yuen 1894: "About this time the Chin Yuen 1894: "About this time the Chin Yuen 1894: " 1894: "About this time the Chih Yuen boldly if somewhat foolhardily bore down on the Japanese squadron's line. Just what happened no one seems to know, but apparently she was struck helow the water line by a heavy shell, either a ten inch or a thirteen inch. Be that as it may, she took a heavy list, and, thus fatally injured, her commander. Tane Shi Chen, a most cent list, and, thus fatally injured, her com-mander, Tang Shi Chen, a most cour-secous albeit a most obstinate officer, resolved at least to avenge himself and charged one of the largest of the en-emy's ships, intending to ram.

"A hurricane of projectiles from both heavy and machine guns swept down upon his ship. The list became more pronounced, and just before getting home to his intended victim his ship rolled over and then plunged bow first rolled over and then plunged bow first into the depths. She righted herself as she sank, her screws whirling in the air and carrying down all hands, including her chief engineer, Mr. Purvis, shut up in the engine room. Seven of her crew clung to one of the circular life bueys kept on the bridge and were drifted by the tide toward the coast, where they were rescued by a junk,

"Stories told by these men vary so much as to be unreliable, but all agree en one incident: Captain Tang had a large dog of most vicious temper, unruly at times even with his master. After the ship sank Captain Tang, who could not swim, managed to get an ear or some small piece of wood. This would have been enough to support him had not his dog swum to him and, climbing up on him, forced him to release his grasp. Thus he miserably drowned, and the brute shared his fate, perhaps the only case on rec-ord of a man being drowned by his

ETIQUETTE OF CALLS.

Some of the Things That Are and Are Not In Good Taste.

Every one is aware that a married woman when paying a formal call on another married couple leaves two of her husband's cards in the hall when coming in or going out.

But every one does not know that

Punctilious people always call at a house from whence they have received an invitation, and this whether it has been declined or accepted. But with the one exception of returning a first call, which should be done as reasonably soon as possible, the question as to what time should elapse between social visits is one that must be left to the good taste and good sense of the caller the caller.

Many people with a large and increasing circle keep a book in which they note the date of their calls, and in this connection it should be stated that it is a compliment to call on the right day—that is, when the hostess is known to be at home to her friends. It used to be considered the right thing for a formal visit only to last about a quarter of an hour. It not in-frequently happens that an idle woman will arrive early and stay late if she happens to be amused and if she has nowhere else to go. Such behavior is particularly inconsiderate when the drawing room of her hostess happens to be a small one and when other visitors are many.

In the country long calls are, of course, permissible, but not in a town. Again, it is not good taste to make appointments to meet a friend at another friend's house, and yet this is frequently done, to the natural annoyance of the hostess, who feels that her reception room is being used much as might be a station waiting room.

A Story of Li Hung Chang. In the diary of Sir M. E. Grant Duff is a fine story of Li Hung Chang, whose candor was never quite equaled in this world. He was dining with a Swedish traveler.

Swedish traveler.

"You come from Sweden," said the great man, "don't you?" "Yes," was the reply. "And what kind of country is Sweden?" rejoined the other, where upon he received, as was natural, a glowing description of its charms, "Ah," he said, "that is very nice; very nice indeed. When I next communicate with the emperor of Russia I will tell him to take Sweden!"

When a man longs to set his country's wrongs before an audience he puts a high value on his time.

"What would be your price for a talk on Russia?" the chairman of the entertainment committee asked the somber faced foreigner.

"Seventy-five dollars for three-quarters of an hour, $50 for an hour and a quarter, $20 for two hours," said the Russian.

Chop very finely a piece of Sunlight Soap and put it into a bottle with a teacupful of hot water, shaking it well and adding a wine glass full of spirits of ammonia. BULWER'S ODDITIES.

Fight the Author Made Against Signs of Old Age.

Bulwer's appearance was decidedly what is generally understood by "aristocratic" or what the French call "dis-tingue." Tall, slim, with finely cut features, prominent among which was a long aquiline nose, with an abundant crop of curly brown hair and a full beard, the first impression he pro-duced, aided by a careful toilet, was one of ease and elegance. At a dinner table, where he liked to speak, and, if possible, to speak alone, he was certainly useful as well as ornamental with his large blue ribbon and star of the Order of the Bath. There was a certain naivete, strange as that word may sound when applied to so confirmed a man of the world, in his vain and very apparent struggle against the ir-resistible encroachment of age. He did not give in with that philosophical resignation which might have been expected of one so clever and in some respects so wise. He fought against it tooth and nail. Lord Lytton's hair seemed dyed, and his face looked as if art had been called in to rejuvenate it. A quack in Paris had pretended to cure his growing deafness, a constant source of legitimate grief to him. He was radiant one autumn on his return to town because he thought he was cured, but not for long. The copious use of snuff was no doubt part of the attempted cure, of which the most palpable results were large dark red or blue pocket handkerchiefs, quite out of harmony with his other-wise elegant toilet. His expressions of regret at his impaired digestive organs had something ludicrous about it. He would point with a sigh to a rosy cheeked American apple and say, "To think that there are people who can eat that!" One of his physical infirmities—his deafness—proved a bar to his ambi-tion. He was sorely disappointed when Lord Beaconsfield, instead of including him in his last cabinet, "kicked him upstairs" into the house of lords, principally because he could not follow the debate.—Rudolph Lehman's
