TRUE TO
HIS RACE

CHAPTER XXVII.

And since 'tis only noble to be good," the young Earl of Wellrose was noble in the best and highest sense of the word, for he was good —and not only good, but wise and brave.

So thought poor Benjamin Hurst, as he gazed upon his unknown brother and generous benefactor, with a heart full of gratitude for words.
"This is the third day of this month. The regiment is expected to sail on the first of the next month.
You will have four weeks for preparation—ample time; and if I can give you any assistance in any shape, I am very heartily at your service," said Lord Wellrose very cordially.

"My lord," faltered Benny, "I feel choked with emotion, and with eyes full of tears. I cannot express the thanks that fill my heart to breaking. Oh, my good lord, I am not worthy of your goodness, and if you know all my past life you would not think me fit to fill the honorable position which you generously obtain for me. I do wish to enter the army, but I am only fit to be a common soldier, and scarcely fit for that; for what honest soldier would consent if he knew it, with a returned convict? Not one. Ah, no! ah, no! my wretched past can never be blotted out," said Benny, burying his face in his hands and groaning deeply.

The young earl laid his hand affectionately on the outcast's shoulder and said:
"Your past life of bitter wrong and unmerited shame can and shall be blotted out. You are but a youth still.
I shall begin life anew from this moment. You are a true, honest condout their judgment would be harsh and their actions severe. But since you do not know the whole, they shall not know a part. Half truth is always so deceptive! They shall know nothing of your past, Benjamin. It is, in fact, none of their business."

"Ah, Lord Wellrose, my very name —my name, which has figured so much in the police reports connected with this murder—my name would betray me!" said Benny, despondently.

"I have been thinking of that, and have been providing for it," said the earl.

"The name you bear, that of Benjamin Hurst, is not your own."
"No," said the poor outcast, sadly.
"I have not even a legal right to the name I bear, since I am not the son of Magdalene Hurst; nor have I even a Christian right to it, since I have never been baptized."

"Then give it up. Cast it off with the slough of your past life. Begin your new life with a new name—a name that I will give you, if you will accept it at my hands—a right and noble name, too, my friend——Seton Douglas! And Heaven knows that you may have a natural, if not a legal right to it, for, though my dear father is a sinner, yet I have heard that there have been some good men in our family. What do you say to the name, Benjamin?"

Benny had turned pale as death. In his secret soul he had lately believed that he was a disowned or unknown relative of that family, and he had longed with a hopeless, unuttered longing, to bear that very name.

"Oh, Lord Wellrose, nothing on earth could give me so much joy as to have me so happy and so grateful as to possess that name. I will do nothing to dishonor it!" he an very sure that you will not, and you have never been baptized, we go to church some day and have baptized and registered as Benjamin Douglas. And when your mission shall be purchased as it is in a day or two, you will enter Majesty's service as Ensign Seton Douglas. And now I must leave you the present, God bless you!" said the earl, rising to go.

never occupied the gay and beautiful rose parlors since the death of her brother. She was dressed in deep mourning, and it may have been that the intense blackness of her dress made her face appear even paler than it was, for it seemed marble white now.

She advanced to meet her visitor very kindly, saying softly:
"Oh, Benny, I am so rejoiced that you are free, and fully vindicated! Oh, my dear boy, when I think of the sacrifice you were about to make for me —more than the sacrifice of your life—when I think of how you meant to die with a load of unmerited ignominy on your memory for my sake, to save my brother's life and my name from reproach, oh, Benny, I think that I and all my fame and all my fortune, if I could give all to you, would be too little to repay you! But you are vindicated and released. Oh, I rejoice, and thank God heartily that you are, my brother! my dearest brother!" she said, taking both his hands and pressing them to her heart.

"Dear Suzy, it is very sweet to hear you say this—very sweet and comforting. But, little sister, I cannot fully rejoice in my freedom, since it has cost me such a cost to you," said the young man, with emotion, as he took the seat she offered him, and he said:
"Don't, Benny, don't say that. It is best as it is. Since my poor, misguided brother had the misfortune to do that fatal deed that made him a fugitive, I have never had any other to suffer unjustly in his place. It is best —oh, so much best—as it is. Benny, dear as my sorrow is for the sudden loss of my poor brother, how much deeper it must have been had you suffered death in his stead, for his deed! Think what my anguish and despair must have been, to have discovered that when I was too late!
Benny, the knowledge would have sent me to my grave, or to a lunatic asylum. It is best as it is. This I can bear. I have the comfort of knowing, through his deathbed confession, that he did not intentionally commit murder. The man Fitzroy richly deserved to be knocked down by the brother of the woman whom he had insulted and traduced. But his death was as much an accident as if he had fallen down. My brother was guiltless of intentional homicide; and you are vindicated and released. It is best as it is.
And now, let us talk of something else—of your new name, and your commission, Ensign Douglas, and your gratitude to me!" she said, with a smile, as she offered him her hand.

He took the little hand and pressed it to his lips.

"Oh, my dear Benny, I am so glad, for your sake," she continued, now speaking earnestly, "that I hear the Earl of Wellrose even much more than ever did before, for your appreciation of me and kindness to you. You are going out as an ensign; come back as a general, Benny! And then, who knows what may be? Rise up, Sir Benjamin Douglas! Stranger things have happened!" she said with a smile.

"I cannot resist like you, dear Suzy.
I shall do my best; but I never expect to rise higher than a lieutenant, at the very most," he said. "But your dear sister of my heart, tell me, if your own plans and purposes, let me know, to what you intend to go out to Australia. Do you still really mean to take that long voyage?"

"Yes, Benny, I have never been there, you know, and I have not seen my parents since they went there, four years ago. It seems a long time. I must go now to see my father and mother, and try to comfort them for the loss of my brother. They are growing old now, Benny," she added sadly.

"How long shall you be absent, Suzy?" enquired the young man.

ring on my finger and to bind myself to me forever. He had selected it that morning, and brought it to put upon my finger as the pledge of his faith, so that I might never doubt him again.
See, here is the ring. I could show you the motto on it, only I do not wish to drag it from my finger. This motto is, 'in truth', she said, holding out her hand and exhibiting a pure diamond.

"No, certainly—if you marry the earl," said Benny.

"I shall never marry the earl," said the young girl very gravely. "And that brings me back to what I was about to say of my motives. For a little time I was very happy in the earl's love—forgetting that I was unfit to be his wife." "I have noticed it before, though I did not know it was the earl's gift. It is a gem of the purest water, I should judge. And I notice that you have not lately worn any other ring."

"Never! For love of this ring, I have discarded all others from my hand, even the rich ruby ring that I liked so much because it was the gift of the Empress of Russia, and she is such a lovely lady. I sang before her majesty three times in the Opera House of St. Petersburg. I shall never sing on any stage again," said Suzy with a sigh.

"I should like to see your ring," said Benny.

RECOVERY OF WOUNDED MEN.
(London Spectator)

The French Government has issued some remarkable figures showing the percentage of wounded men who have recovered, or are recovering and are, or will be, fit again for service. The figures are taken up to December 1: Wounded, but fit for almost immediate return to the front, 62.62 per cent.
Wounded, and not fit for service, but recovering, 24.29 per cent.
Wounded, and still in hospital 13.09 per cent.
Permanently disabled . . . 1.40 per cent.
unit for further service, wounded, and died from wounds, 3.88 per cent.
The enormous proportion of complete recoveries testifies to the humanness of the surgeons. But there is another feature of the figures that will return to the front. When we speak of the casualties of an army we must remember that it would be quite misleading to deduct them bodily from the fighting strength of that army. Casualties nowadays are chiefly temporary.

U. S. SHIP PURCHASE.
(Buffalo News)

The administration is taking a false step on this ground, as well as on half a dozen others that have been started in the course of the argument. It is a vital mistake for the government to go into business at all. It is its function of that institution, but to furnish the money that will allow other nations to build up their navies. It is not the business of the government to purchase ships that will be used for war. It is the duty of the government to see that it does not become a party to any war. It is the duty of the government to see that it does not become a party to any war.

GERMANY'S WANING HOPE.
(Ottawa Citizen)

If Germany is pinning her hopes of final victory on the destruction of the British fleet it would appear that she has a very remote chance of success.
The navy is steadily strengthening and within six months will have attained the point where it will be invulnerable to power, speed, and wartime expediency.

THIRTEEN PRIZES TO BE AWARDED IN A LETTER WRITING
COMPETITION.

Some years ago the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of Brockville, Ont., offered a series of prizes to residents of the Province of Ontario for the best letters describing cures wrought by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Hundreds of letters were submitted in this competition and yet there must have been thousands of other users of the pills who did not avail themselves of the opportunity to win a prize. To all these another letter writing competition is offered. Thousands of cures through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have never been reported. These will furnish the material for the letter to be written in this contest. There is no demand upon the imagination; every letter must deal with facts and facts only.

THE PRIZES.
The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of Brockville, Ont., will award a prize of $25.00 for the best letter received on or before the 1st day of March, 1915, from the residents of Ontario, on the subject: "Why I recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills." A prize of $10.00 will be awarded for the second best letter received; a prize of $5.00 for the third best letter; and ten prizes of $2.00 each for the next best ten letters.

THE CONDITIONS.
The cure or benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills described in the letter may be the writer's own, or one that has come under his personal observation.
More than one cure may be described in the letter, but every statement must be literally and absolutely true.
Every letter must be signed by the full name and correct address of the person sending it. If it describes the cure of some person other than the writer of the letter, also it must be signed by the person whose cure is described as a guarantee of the truth of the statements made.
The writer of each letter must state the name and date of the paper in which he or she saw this announcement.
If you have a good case to describe, the strength of the recommendation and not the style of the letter will be the basis of the award.
It is understood that the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. shall have the right to publish any letter entered in this contest if they desire to do so whether it wins a prize or not.
The contest will close on March 1st, 1915, and the prizes will be awarded as soon as possible thereafter. Do not delay. If you know of a cure above your letter NOW. Observe the above conditions carefully or your letter may be thrown out.
Address all letters as follows:
The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co.,
Brockville, Ont.
Letter Contest Department.

THE BEST WAY.
A Handful of Helpful Household Suggestions for You.

To clean the glass globes of chandlers when they have become smoked and grimy, soak them in hot water to which a little sal soda has been added; then put some ammonia in hot water and dip the globes in this, scrubbing them briskly with a stiff brush; rinse well and wipe dry.
To test water, almost fill a clean pitcher bottle with it and add a half-teaspoonful of granulated sugar. Cork tightly and keep in a warm place for two days. If at the end of that time the water has become cloudy or milky it is unfit for domestic use.
To clean dainty table covers or silk, rub magenta on the soiled spots and put away for a few days. Put plenty on both sides. When wanted for use again brush well and the spots will be gone.

It All Started
From a Bad Cold

Watford Man Found Relief in
Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mr. Robert Taylor, Sr., After Suffering for Two Years, Tells of the Benefits He got from Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Watford, Ont., Feb. 8 (Special).— Mr. Robert Taylor, Sr., a very established man living here, is telling his friends that the pain in his back, from which he suffered for some time, has disappeared, and that he gives all the credit to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"My trouble started with a cold," Mr. Taylor states, "and then I was treated by a doctor. I got no permanent relief. I had cramps in my stomach and stiffness in my joints, my sleep was broken and unrefreshing and I perspired freely with the least exertion. I had attacks of rheumatism and sciatica, and though I tried many medicines I found no relief till I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills.
I must say they were a great benefit to me."

Mr. Taylor's troubles came from his kidneys. The diseased kidneys failed to strain the urine and out of the blood and the result was as he has stated—Dodd's Kidney Pills put the kidneys in working order, the uric acid was strained out of the blood and the troubles went with it.

KETTLE VALLEY

What This Line Means to Transcontinental Traffic.
The completion of the Kettle Valley Railway will mean to transcontinental traffic, both freight and passenger, was explained by Dr. J. J.
Warren, the president of the company, who has been spending a few days east. For years past the Canadian Pacific Railway has been wrestling with the problem of reducing grades in the Rocky Mountain section, and it is probable that it will continue the struggle for years to come.
Even in days when expansion work is necessarily restricted and curtailed, orders are given, for example, to push the work on the Rogers Pass, toward completion. But with the Kettle Valley Railway and the Canadian Central Railway in operation, the Canadian Pacific will have alternative routes from the main line which should at once make upon any continental the handling of trains to the Pacific coast. The Kettle Valley line in southern British Columbia, which links up with railways in the United States, and with the Canadian Pacific, which has running rights over it, will make a admirable alternative route by way of the Crown's Nest Pass, by its grades nowhere exceed 2 per cent. while the Kootenay Central has an average grade of less than 1 per cent.
The Kettle Valley line will, so be of great value to the fruit growers of Okanagan Valley, as it tends to Benton and Sumner, and will then in direct touch with the inland districts of south British Columbia. As a scenic route the line should prove attractive to tourists, as the southern end of the Okanagan Valley is by far the most picturesque portion of this favored section of British Columbia.
Dr. early summer the fall season service will be in operation. Dr.
Warren expects that a large volume of the transcontinental traffic will be diverted to his line.

GUESS!

Emperor William says: "One man with God is always in the majority." can guess the name of the one man he means?
No man is so dull that he can't make a bore of himself.
