Nature's Specific For The Weak. Brokendown and Diseased.

Frank, honest speaking of husband o wife, wife to husband, and friend to friend is more urgently called for today than ever before. In the spring season when the hus band notes that his wife's vitality is low-when he knows that she has headaches, backaches, sideaches, is nervous, sleepless, has loss of appetite and energy, perhaps racked with the pains of rheumatism or neuralgia, it is criminal for him to try to cone her with the thought that all will be well when the fine summer weather comes in. It is the imperative duty of such husbands to suggest—nay to in-sist that wise and effectual treatment be at once resorted to. Frank and plain speaking at the right moment will often save a precious life. Wives should act in the same way towards their husbands, when the first symptoms of ill health are apparent. Friend should speak to friend giving kindly warning and advice, above all, pointing to that marvellous spring health-giver, Paine's Celery

Many a life has been saved by the kind and unselfish recommendations of those who have been made well and strong by Paine's Celery Compound. The use of the great medicine has been urged upon sick, suffering and diseased friends, and Heaven has blessed their work. Honest physicians and conscientious druggists have saved the lives of many by promptly recommending the use of Dr. Phelp's wonderful prescription. While speaking to those in ill health, always give them to understand that Paine's Celery Compound will without fail meet their cessities at this season.

A Story of Charles Frederic Goss.

RECENTLY a Chicago newspaper man paused before a bookstore window which was heaped high with copies of The Redemption which lightning struck in the right place. If the size of an author's heart determined the measure of his success Goss would sell a million copies.

"When I struck Chicago I had neither job nor prospect of one. There was not a man in the whole big city who knew me, and it didn't take many days of knocking about from one newspaper office to another to convince me that not a human being here cared to know me. But that was where I made my mistake. One night I happened to step inside Mr. Moody's Chicago Avenue Church. Mr. Charles Frederic Goss was in charge . the work, and at the close of the se .ices I met him. He passed over the conventional revivalistic questions regarding my spiritual condition, but quickly found out where I was stopping, and that I was looking for work and had met with disappoint ment in my applications. From that hour I felt that I certainly had one friend in Chicago—and he a very cheerful one.

"Week after week passed, and finally a month and a half, before I secured my first position. In the latter part of that probe .onary period I was in constant terror of the day of reckoning that was to come with my landlady, to whom I had not paid a dollar. Strangely enough, however, she never men tioned the matter or suggested that I find some other place. My credit appeared to be as firm as that of the bank cashier at my right, who paid his board every Saturday night, before the whole company, handing out crisp bills as he took his seat at the table.

"Finally, when I was able to pay her I spoke of the unaccountable forbear-ance she had shown me as a stranger. "'Oh, I knew you were all right,' she replied. 'Mr. Goss came here to the house and talked with me about you. Any boarder who has him for a friend can let his bills run with me as long as he needs.

"All this time the author of David Corson had been keeping my courage up by as uring me there was a for every honest man who had a desire to work; but he had never so much as hinted that he had personally established my credit at the boarding-house where I was in arrears.

"He always gave away a large share of his salary, and was never so happy as when helping some person in desperate circumstances. In his college course he had a great battle to retain his grasp on the faith which had been taught him in boyhood. This struggle can be traced very distinctly in the pages of his novel."

A Heated Discussion.

"At this point," said the narrator, "she broke down and wept scalding tears." "My goodness!" exclaimed the listener, "she must have been boiling over with rage."-Chicago "News."

Man's Self-Conceit.

F the wonders of the exhibition, which Glasgow has made so successful, have begot any general sense of pride in the achievements of mankind, and particularly of those pushing and ingenious folk who dwell in the City by the Clyde, a perusal Professor Rucker's speech at the of the British Association for the Advancement of Science in the Scottish metropolis, will prove a whole some corrective says the "Outlook" confession that, "with all our searchlags, we have not torn the veil of mystery from the world around us. There is nothing so true, and nothing so salutary to remember. Mankind tends evermore to self-conceit; that tendency is encouraged by the daily newspaper. Perhaps some physicist in his researches blunders on some simple property of matter, or condition of the forces about us, and the Roentgen rays are the result. Immediately arises in the press a shrick of exultation. One would think at such times that Na-ture was about to open out her heart and reveal all her mysteries. But the only fact in the matter appears to be that the human intellect is not fit to comprehend the nature of things. The nature of things is all about us; it only remains mysterious to us because of our incapacity to grasp it. As Professor Rucker reminds us, the span of human life is a very short time in which to study the manifestations of Nature. If we lived longer the problems would appear different. Nor can we transmit our individual knowledge. Each person has to begin at the beginning; he is the slave of his faculties, which, very evidently, were not intended to grasp all at once the character of the universe. The most profound thinkers and investigators know best how ignorant man is. Professor Rucker follows a long line of presi-dents in reminding us that we know practically nothing.

The Arts of Childhood. "We hear a good deal these days about the lost arts," said the man who, though old in years, is still young at heart. "I wonder if the world realizes that some of the most precious arts of childhood are in danger of be-coming extinct? How many boys today can make a kite, properly hung and with a tail sufficient to balance, the ends nicely bent and worked down with a bit of broken glass? I inter-viewed my young nephew the other day, and was thunderstruck to discover that he knew nothing about it. cover that he knew nothing about it. Could he make a water-wheel, a wind-mill, an elder pop-gun, a jack-lantern, a buzz-wheel, an air-gun from a goose-quill, with a sliced potato for ammunition; a willow whistle, a squirt-gun? No; he knew nothing about them. 'But surely,' said I, almost pathetically, 'you can make a cornstalk fiddle?' 'Do you mean a violin, unk?' said he, yawning. Then I gave it up. I don't believe the youths of to-day know enough to stick a feather in a corncob and throw it into the air. I am enough to stick a feather in a corn-cob and throw it into the air. I am going to write a book some day upon the arts of childhood to save them from utter annihilation."—Detroit "Free Press."

Printers Blungers.

HERE is a fatality often attending the final stages of the printing of a book or an article. Proof after proof has been corrected with scrupulous care, and there seems nothing more for au-thor or proofreader to do, when a line or word falls out, giving an epportuni-ty for some stupendous blunder in set-ting things straight. The corrector of the press is sometimes himself respon-sible for a literary atrocity, when some brilliant flash of stupidity occurs to him too late to be submitted as a query to the poor author. Thus a certain scholar found the Candian vessel, in which he described Beza as voyaging, transformed into the anachronism of a Canadian vessel. Mr. Howells tells us of the agony he suffered at the discovery of a fearful misprint in his "Pilot's Story." The tale is of a young planter who has gambled away the slave girl who is the mother of his child. She breaks out upon him with the demand:

"What will you say to our boy when he cries for me there in St. Louis? In this form the line passed the author himself and the first proofreader; but the final reader, evidently a pronounced realist, thought it could be improved, and accordingly changed it

"What will you say to our boy when he cries for 'Ma,' there in St. Louis?" The whole edition had been struck off before the enormity was discovered by Mr. Howells himself, who happened to call on the publisher just as the sheets had come in from the printers at Cambridge. Mr. Fields at once decided that the sheet should be re-printed, so Mr. Howells had a hairbreadth escape from a mischance that might have gone far to ruin his career. The hymnbook of one of the Metho-dist churches in England is guilty of an outrageous subversion of the moral standard when it attributes to Doctor Isaac Watts the sentiment:

My days of praise shall ne'er be past, While life and thought and being last. Or immorality endures.

Mr. William Archer mentions a curious instance of the inveterate persistence of a misquotation from edition to edition of a classic author. He has never come across an edition of the Waverley Novels in which the motto to Chapter XXV. of "The Tallsman"

Yet this inconsistency is such As thou, too, shalt adore; I could not love thee, love, so much, Loved I not honor more.

But the quotation ought to run:

Yet this inconstancy is such As you, too, shall adore:

I could not love thee, dear, so much, Loved I not honor more. Richard Lovelace

Obviously, the misquotation was originally due, in part, at least, to Scott himself, but it is impossible to believe that he was responsible for the non-sensical and unmetrical "inconsisten-

Partridges' Eggs.

New Orleans "Times-Democrat." "But few persons are aware of the fact," said a well-known physician yesterday, "but it is true, nevertheless, that the egg of the partridge is one of the most nutritious things in the world. They are not used for eating purposes except in very rare cases, and then it generally happens in remote rural dis-tricts. I have known negro families in the State of Louisiana during the laying season to live on the eggs of partridges. And they would flourish handsomely and grow fat on account of the rich properties of the eggs. These eggs, of course, never find their These eggs, of course, never find their way into the market, because they are never taken from their nest except by such persons as I have mentioned, and they rob the nests, I suppose, because their principal food supply comes from this source. Quall meat comes pretty high in the market at all times, and the average man will find it mere average. the average man will find it more pro the average man will find it more pro-fitable to spare the eggs and wait for the birds when the hunting season rolls around. These men would pass a hundred nests in one day without disturbing an egg. The sport of hunt-ing the birds is an additional incentive. The average negro does not care so much about this aspect of the case. He figures that the white man, having the best gun and the best dog will best figures that the white man, having the best gun and the best dog, will beat him to the bird. So he goes after the eggs. One partridge will lay anywhere from a dozen to twenty eggs, and a nest is a good find. I know of many families in rural sections who feast on these eggs in the laying season. I have tried the egg myself as an experiment. I found it peculiarly rich. It has a good flavor, is very palatable, and, in fact, is altogether a very fine thing to eat. Really, I believe that the egg has more nutrition in it than the fully developed bird, but, of course, as one of the men fond of the game in the field, I would like to discourage the robbery of the nests."

A Breakfast Dish That

Pleases Every Palate

A food that pleases every palate, soothes the weakest stomach and that aids digestion, means much to those who, in the past, have not been able to fully enjoy the first meal of the day -breakfast. A breakfast that is not satisfying or that is not fully enjoyed cannot fit old or young for the duties es the palates of young and old by its delicious flavor, but it imparts to the body and brain a vim and vigor that ordinary oatmeal and common foods cannot give. It is, the malt with all its virtues and valuable properties that does the good work. Try this grand health food in your home if you are a stranger to it. It gives a new life and healthy appetite to the dyspeptie victim. Ask your grocer Malt Breakfast Food.

A grain of sand in the eye can cause excruciating agony. A grain of pep-per in place of the grain of sand in-tensifies the torment. The pain is not confined to the organs affected. The whole body feels the shock of that lit-the irritating particle. It is so when there is any derangement or disorder of the delicate womanly organs. The disorder may seem trivial but the whole body feels it. The nervous sys-tem is disordered. There are fretful-ness, irritability, sullenness and de-pression of spirits. The general health of woman decends on the local health of woman depends on the local health of the organs peculiarly feminine. Re-move the drains, ulcerations, bearing down pains, and other afflictions of woman, and the whole body feels the benefit. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a specific for the diseases that undermine the strength of wo-men. It is free from opium, cocaine and other narcotics, poisons which en-ter into many other preparations for woman's use. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

Perfect Cure for Bronchitis

This disease can be treated only by a remedy carried to the affected parts along with the air breathed, for noture intended these organs for the passage of air alone, and sprays, atomizers and internal medicines utterly fail. But Catarrhozone doesn't fail, for it goes wherever the air breathed goes, and its healing antiseptic vapor is sure to reach every affected part. Catarrhozone is inhaled at the mouth and after passing through every air cell of the breathing organs is slowly exhaled through the nostrils. Catarrh ozone protects and heals the inflamed surfaces, relieves congestion, allays inflammation, and perfectly cures all bronchial affections. Price $1. Small size 25c. Druggists, or Polson & Co.
