SOME IRREGULARITIES. Mr. Wilson called attention to the fact that children were attending the Public schools, while their parents were supporting the Separate schools.

J. E. Johnston—There is good work for a truant officer to look after non-residents attending the Public schools, Separate school pupils and truants.

Andrew Thomson—I agree with Mr. Johnston. It would take one man all his time just looking after these.

The matter then dropped.

It was decided by the board to let the public know that the King St. school property was for sale.

God save the Queen.

The important feature of the evening was the presentation of the watch and chain. The watch was engraved as follows:—"Presented to Henry A. Burrell by friends in Chatham and Dover, for services in the First Canadian Contingent in South Africa, in 1900." The address was given by exald. S. B. Arnold, of Chatham, and the presentation by Peter Grant. Mr. Burrell in reply explained many of the positions which the soldiers had to go through, and exhibited his rifle and the chocolate box presented by the Queen.

Sir,—It is with feelings of pleasure that your friends in the vicinity in which you live, welcome you back to this your home from the perits of war in South Africa.

When our Mother Country was struggling for a recognition of her rights and for the franchise and liberty of her subjects in South Africa, and when it was deemed advisable to offer substantial aid to her in the struggle by forming what is known as the Cana-lan Contingent for service in South Africa, you were one of the in South Africa, you were one first of Canada's loyal sons to yourseif, to leave country, home and friends to assist in maintaining the honor of the nation of which we form a part and the liberty of its subject. Your task has been no easylone; you crossed the ocean thousands of miles to a foreign country with its burning sun, its rainy season, and its penetrating dust storms, a climate to which you have not been accustomed; you have suffered on forced marches; you have fett the pangs of thirst; you have faced death from a hidden, skulking foe; and on the battlefield of Paardeberg, where your brave comrade Donegan met this death you fully realized the horrors of war.

But, Sir, there is a bright side to your sufferings, a silver lining to the clouds we hope have passed; on this battlefield of Paardeberg you have merited the right to be recognized as a term battle shown that Canadians battlefield of Paardeberg you have merited the right to be recognized as a hero; you have shown that Canadians whether tolling in repairing or building railroads, or in forced marches, or in the face of an enemy, are second to mone the world over. You have merited and received recognition from the General in command of the army and of our beloved Queen. You have shown the world that any wrong inflicted on the Mother Country must be reckoned with her Colonies. You assisted in doing more towards binding reckoned with her Colonies. You assisted in doing more towards binding the Colonies to the Mother Country than ambassadors and diplomats have done in centuries. The result even from a material standpoint of trade and commerce will be farther reaching than we ever dreamed of.

MR. BURRELL'S REPLY.

The Planet as follows:

I desire to express my gratitude and appreciation for the magnificent watch and chain, which you have presented to me. It was more than genprous.

One of the brightest features of the experiences on the field and in camp during the campaign was the knowledge we possessed that our friends at home were watching our progress with a loyal interest, and this fact was always an incentive to doing our was always an incentive to doing our

The kind welcome which were accorded was sufficient recognition of our services as your representatives, and a gift such as yours is as over-whelming as it was unexpected. I can only tender you all a devout Thank you, and trust I may always prove worthy of your friendship and interest.

Gratefully yours, H. BURRELL. THEIR THANKS.

A good sized audience greeted the presentation of A Female Drummer at the Grand last evening and throughly enjoyed the successful extravaganza. The company is a large one and their show capital and intensely humorous. The specialties of which there were many, were good and the situations really funny. The audience was well satisfied with the production.
