SIR GEORGE DIBBS.

Picturesque Career of the Former Premier of the Australian Colony of New South Wales.

Marquis de Fontenay: Sir George Dibbs, former Premier of the Australian colony of New South Wales, has had an extraordinary career. He began life as an office boy in a wine merchant's firm in Sydney, after which he took to sea. During the Civil War here and again during the trouble in South America some years later, he acquired considerable notoriety and wealth as a blockade runner, but after returning to Australia he quickly lost all his money and became a bankrupt. This led him to abandon business for politics, but being blessed with an unquenchable temper, it was not long before he got into trouble by assaulting a political opponent with such vigor that he had killed him, being sentenced to twelve months in the penitentiary for the offence.

While in prison he was forced to work in the same way as the other convicts and learned the trade of wood-carving. In the course of time his forceful methods landed him in the Premiership of New South Wales, and one of his first acts on becoming Prime Minister was to appoint the jailer who had had special charge of him while in prison to the governorship of the penitentiary where he had been incarcerated. On the occasion of his visit to England as Colonial Premier he was summoned to Windsor, and not only invited to dinner, but also knighted by Queen Victoria, to whom as a token of respect, he presented the sword which he had carved while doing time in one of Her Majesty's jails in Australia. He was breezy in his conversation, his remarks being rendered refreshing by his lack of education, and I recall a funny incident in this connection, in the course of a political speech which he delivered. He had quoted a Biblical passage in support of his arguments, whereupon one of his political opponents rather maliciously inquired whether the verse was "in the Douay version," that being the name of the English translation of the Bible in use among Roman Catholics. Sir George haughtily retorted, "The honorable gentleman may go to the library and consult Mr. Dooley if he likes, I have no time to do so."

The roar of laughter that ensued disconcerted Sir George and he subsequently had much difficulty to appease the wrath of his Catholic friends and political supporters, who naturally fancied that some slight to their religion was intended by the suggestion that their version of the Bible was the work of "Mr. Dooley."

A Big Coin Factory. Birmingham, England, has a mint which in addition to turning out millions of English coins does more in the way of supplying foreign Governments with coin than any other money-making establishment in the world.

A few days ago it shipped the first instalment of a huge Egyptian order for 10,000,000 piasters. The consignment weighed five tons, was conveyed in sixty cases and valued at $15,000,000. For well over a century Birmingham has taken the lead in this literal kind of money making. As far back as 1797 one firm coined under contract for the British Government 4,000 tons of copper coin, valued at about $4,000,000. Among the countries and Governments which have gone time after time to Birmingham for their money are India, Tunis, Canada, Turkey, China, Hong Kong, Hayti, Sarawak, Tuscany, Venezuela and Chile.

In some instances, notably that of China, the coins were not made in Birmingham. As a matter of fact, no Chinese coin has, so far as is known, ever been made outside of the Celestial Empire. The pride and prejudice of the Chinese have to be humored, so the firm sent out a complete plant with men to operate it, and the coins were struck in China. No fewer than eight separate plants have been sent out to China in this way.

For the new kingdom of Italy the same thing was done in 1862. A 600-ton consignment of "blanks" being shipped to furnish the raw material. Again, in Marseilles, when the re-establishment of the Empire under Napoleon II. rendered necessary a new copper coinage, 700 tons of metal were in this way turned into money on French soil.

Legal Ties That Bind the Empire. The principal legal ties between England and the colonies, says The Law Magazine and Review, may be summarized thus: The Governors are appointed by the Crown, and diplomatic intercourse, as regards foreign countries, is carried on by the Imperial Government, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and the Supreme Court of Appeal. The power of making treaties, resides in the Crown, and unless the Imperial Government act the authorities of the colonial Government will do so. The will of the Imperial Parliament is supreme in all things. In spite, however, of this sovereign supremacy in letters, in practice it does not interfere in local affairs. The legislative liberty thus conferred on the colonies may at first sight seem incompatible with the sovereignty of the Imperial Parliament, but the absolute recognition of that supremacy is sufficient guarantee of its maintenance, whilst the power retained of reviewing colonial enactments prevents the legal impossibility of conflict between Imperial and colonial laws.

Gruesome British Enterprise. Photography (London) says: The agent of a cinematograph company, it is reported, has come to an arrangement with the Governor of Canton by which all executions are to be saved up, as it were, for one month. The exact number of dollars required to insult the Pook-Bah of Canton sufficiently to lead him to make such an arrangement is not stated, but the living picture man hopes thus to secure a charming and delightful film for the benefit of his patrons in London.

THE MAN IN THE MOON.

Some Curious and Varied Beliefs as to His Identity.

According to Pratorius, the man in the moon is the patriarch Isaac, carrying the bundle of sticks which were to be lighted to sacrifice his own body on the mountain top. Dante believes him to be Cain, carrying a bundle of thorns, the manest offering his lands afforded, as a present to God. In Iceland the people claim that they can see the face of Adam in the moon and that of Eve in the sun. Among the Fribergers there is a superstition which says that the marks and spots on the moon's face are the outlines of the traitor Judas Iscariot, holding his hand over his face while sneezing just prior to hanging himself. This last belief accords with the old Frankish legend which says that there was no spot on Luna's bright face until after the time of the crucifixion of Christ. Still another story tells us that in the time of the creation God threw an offending angel against the face of the moon, while another is to the effect that the moon witnessed the creation of Adam and Eve and took an impress of their features on his surface, intending to people his own land with similar beings. When he essayed to imitate God's works, he made nothing but a slimy serpent, which since that day has continued to fold and unfold its mighty coils in full view of the descendants of the God created beings.

ABOUT GRENFELL.

Sketch of Ancestry and of the Man Most Prominent in Scotland's History.

Taplow Court, the Buckinghamshire seat of W. H. Grenfell, who is now the most prominently mentioned to succeed Lord Minto as Governor-General, stands on the summit of the end of the range of hills which runs along the River Thames from Maidenhead to Henley. The site of the present house has been inhabited from the earliest times. The Grenfells came originally from Cornwall, and claim among their ancestors men who made great names among the people of the west, to whom the late Charles Kingsley, who married a Miss Grenfell, used to trace their pedigree; and the four daughters of the family fortune were laid by a small squire, one Pascoe Grenfell, who, at the end of the last century, started works at Swanscombe to smelt the Cornish copper ores and finally fixed upon Taplow as his country place of residence, and erected the tomb to be seen in the old Taplow churchyard. On this I saw it recorded that Pascoe Grenfell represented Great Marlow in five successive Parliaments—from 1802 to 1820—and as his son, Charles Pascoe Grenfell, represented Preston, and his son and Mr. Grenfell's father was member for Windsor and Deal and Sandwich. Mr. Grenfell may be said to have come of an old Parliamentary family, whose tradition he himself has kept up by representing Salisbury and Hereford in the House of Commons. His mother, too, the daughter of the Rt. Hon. W. Sebright, and Lady Caroline Lascelles is a member of a family which has taken no small part in public affairs.

As An Athlete. So much, then, for ancestry. As to W. H. Grenfell himself, he has attained distinction in more than one walk of life. Athlete, sportsman, war correspondent, legislator, country gentleman, publicist and an expert on the currency question, his personality is as attractive and striking as any to be found in the ranks of our country gentlemen.

The present owner of Taplow Court, was born rather more than 49 years ago, on Oct. 30, 1855. His preparatory schooling he received at Malvern Wells. In his thirteenth year he not only was proving himself a scholar, but by the death of his father, succeeded to the ancestral estate.

At Harrow he soon became of note both as an athlete and a cricketer. At the age of 18 he was the bowler par excellence of the school, while his high status as a runner was firmly established. And he was at the same time no laggard at his books.

His Alpinism in Eight Days. He entered Balliol in 1874, where his cricketer and athletic reputation had preceded him. It was during his Oxford career, in fact, just after his graduation, that he prepared a surprise for Alpine guides and established a record in Alpine climbing. In eight days he "did" the Little Matterhorn, Monte Rosa, Jothorn and Matterhorn and the Wisehorn. It is almost needless to say that this was very smart work indeed.

On the walls of Mr. Grenfell's own "den"—on the left of the entrance hall to Taplow Court—are plentiful photographic portraits of the eight and eleven in which he figured prominently, as well as pictures of Alpine heights; while in his great central glass roofed hall, around which the house is built, may be seen cars and tankards and other mementoes of his physical powers on the river and running-path.

In the winter of his period of travel and adventure, Mr. Grenfell thoroughly familiarized himself with Switzerland and Canada. Three times he stood on the summit of the Matterhorn and once passed le temps struck an Oxford eight across the English Channel across Niagara.

Another achievement of Mr. Grenfell's was the swimming twice across Niagara from the American to the Canadian shore, quite close to where the fall strikes the water below and fills the air with sprays. According to Mr. Grenfell it was mainly a matter of keeping the legs up during the swim, so as to avoid the eddies locally known as "flams."

"The second time I did it," he said, "I was for a while in a terrible funk, I can tell you, for I got into the back water and could feel it carrying me under the falls."

On two occasions Mr. Grenfell went on hunting expeditions into the Rocky Mountains. On the first of these, in 1884, he was accompanied by his friend, the Hon. Gilbert Leigh. In the Big Horn Mountains, Wyoming, he was once lost while wandering out of camp in search of game.

Chased Tigers, Too. Both Mr. and Mrs. Grenfell visited India in the winter of 1891-2 and were the guests of Lord and Lady Harris at Bombay. Lord and Lady Venlock at Madras, and the Viceroy and Marchioness of Lansdowne farther north. Here they spent a very enjoyable time. Mr. Grenfell getting some elephant and other shooting in the southeastern presidency. They also visited the Maharajah of Kuch Behar, where they played lawn tennis and went shooting.

Mr. Grenfell has become prominently identified with the bi-metallist movement, and it was largely owing to the strong and convinced views he held and still holds on this subject that he resigned his seat in the House of Commons for Hereford in the summer of 1898. Mr. Grenfell's home is plentifully decorated with the trophies of the chase, more than fifty antlers of red deer adorning the walls of his own special room alone. This apartment, no less than the library, contains a good store of books, while Taplow Court possesses not a few fine paintings.

The weight of the average sized man is 140 pounds, of a woman, 125 pounds.

STARTLED CARLYLE.

New Charles Godfrey Leland Bought the Cry to His Sense.

Charles Godfrey Leland said that on his first meeting with Carlyle the wise man showed himself in a somewhat cynical frame of mind, from which he was aroused only by a bit of wholesome opposition.

"And what kind of an American may you be—German or Irish or what?" Carlyle asked.

"Since it interests you, Mr. Carlyle," replied Leland, "to know the origin of my family I may say that I am descended from Henry Leland, a noted Puritan, who went to America in 1636."

"I doubt whether any of your family have since been equal to your old Puritan great-grandfather," growled Carlyle, and this, combined with some stirring remarks which he had previously thrown out in regard to America and her history, roused Leland's spirit.

"Mr. Carlyle," he said deliberately, "I think that my brother, Henry Leland, who got the wound from which he died standing by my side in the war of the rebellion, was worth ten of my old Puritan ancestors. At least he died in a ten times better cause. And allow me to say, Mr. Carlyle, that I think in all matters of historical criticism you are principally influenced by the merely melodramatic and theatrical."

Carlyle looked utterly amazed and startled, though not at all angry.

"What's that ye say?" he cried in broad Scotch.

Mr. Leland repeated the remark. A grin smelt as of admiration came over the stern old face. It was with a deeply reflective and not displeased air that he replied, still in Scotch.

"Na, na, I'm nae that," he said. And he dropped into a milder strain and made the interview an occasion to be treasured long in memory.

Say, pa? Well, what? Why does that man in the band run the trombone down his throat? I suppose it is because he has a taste for music.

"Say, Jimmie, dis 'ere stuff is sure der swellest dat ever come over der pike."
