Continued from first page. start up at the sound, but only to sleep again. All is well.

Through the darkness-through the blacker mantle of the fog-throbbing, breathing, living the great iron monster pushes her way, and every few seconds the omnious sound of the whistle booms out to be caught up by the wreaths and smothered in the folds which are pressing down as if to smother their victim.

Throb! throb! Boom! boom! But ed and all work guaranteed. all is well !

Overdue by five days, but no cause for anxiety. Ten days but she may have broken a shaft. Twenty days-she must be lost, but there are hopes that some of the people got safely away in boats. Six months a year-two-three-five. Never a word nor a line-not so much as a bit of driftwood. It is simply: "Missing."

THE COUNTRY EDITOR.

The country editor has a hard road to travel. He is the reporter, book-keeper, mechanical superintendent, business manager, collector, mailing machine and soliding agent of the establishment. Fis vota is herd, his receipts are small and his creditors numerous. In a small town an editor has to steet his course so as to avoid giving offense to different circles of society, the religious denominations, the business community and the rural population. It an influential old farmer wants a three column notice of his new barn, it must appear, or the editor may lose a bundred subscribers. Patch-work quilts, big beets and phenomenal eggs also can or for space in the columns of the country paper. In the course of time the rural scall her becomes either incose or morose, but in either frame of mind he continues to meet friends who demand free advertising or enemies who work

The country editor is always getting ready to abandon journalism for some thing else, but he rarely carries out his threat. He generally dies in barness, In some wild communities editors occasionally meet with rough treatment-Sometimes they are driven out of the country and, when other methods of genting rid of them fail, they are sent to the legislature. The bity editor gets a good deal of fun out of the country editors work, but the man who bears the burden regards it as a serious business. And in the best sense it is serious. The little local weeklies scattered all over the country are in their way potential factors of civilization. They develop their localities, bring their resources before the public, and it a mariner educate their readers. They are always on the side of the viturcies, the schools, progress and reform. Men who live and die working for such objects are public benefactors, and deserve a substantial reward.

It is refreshing to occasionally review the work of the country editor. If the patrons of a paper knew how some of their toiling editors were obliged to "rub" for a living, they would not delay paying their bills when due. As a rule, no family can afford to do without the paper which dispenses home news once a week. To support such an enterprise should not only be a duty but a pleasure. - Cambridge (Mass) Tribune.

MORE EFFECTIVE THAN PRO-HIBITION.

In ancient Mexico the people knew nothing of prohibition and local option methods; but they had a summary way of punishing drunkenness. If an officer or man of distinction got drunk he was hung, and his body was then dragged along a public highway and thrown into the river. If the drunkard belonged to the lower classes he was sold into slaver! for the first offence, and for the second he was bung. It was the theory of the Mexicar law that the offender who was the highest in rank merited the most vigorous punishment. Under such a code of laws drunkenness was of vege rare occurence among the ancient Maicans. All that, however was in the state of barbarism. In these civilized days the modern Mexican gets as drunk as a "hiled owl," and nothing is thought of it.-Atlanta Constitution.

LABOR AND INTELLECT.

We are always in these days trying to separate the two; we want one man to always be working, and we call one a gentleman and the other an operative; mouth for Boston every Saturday, p m, on arrival of W. U. R'y train from Digby. whereas the workman ought often to be thinking and the thinker often to be working, and both should be gentlemen in the best sense. As it is we make both urgentle, the one envying, the other despising his brother, and the mass of society is made of morbid thinkers and miserable workers.- John Ruskin.

Do not under any consideration, place a person who has had anything against his character in a place of trust. This may seem rash, but what a man has done once he may de again.
