WE ARE IN THE Monumental Business

We devote all our time and energies to this line only. We employ tradesmen who thoroughly understand their business—some of them having served their time with the old reliable firm of Cairns & McLean. Proprietors are one of the most particular branches of our trade; without a Monument cannot look well. This is one of the places where some competitors are continually going astray. We do not import condensed stock full of cracks and stains because it is cheap, but we pay the right price and get the right goods.

THE BALANCE OF OUR STOCK WILL BE CLEARED OUT AT COST

TOPICS OF THE DAY.

FATHER LACOMBE.

(From the Northwest Review, Winnipeg Manitoba.)

After an absence of nine months, the venerable and beloved missionary, Rev. Father Lacombe, O. M. I., returned here last Friday, looking better than when we saw him last in March. Since that time he has visited Belgium in the interests of immigration, Austria for spiritual ministrations to the Galicians, and Rome, where he spent two months according to ecclesiastical matters with which his Grace the Archbishop and the suffragan Bishops of this ecclesiastical province had charged him.

A representative of the "Northwest Review" called on Father Lacombe last Friday evening and was granted a long interview, too long to insert it all this time. We have only space for a few points. "So you saw the Holy Father in private?" "Yes; I had almost despaired of doing so during the jubilee year, when Rome is crowded with visitors. The Pope's physician regulates all visits. If he says 'No,' even a Cardinal cannot get in. However, Monsignor Merry del Val kindly managed that I should be presented to the Sovereign Pontiff with about a dozen young ecclesiastics belonging to the Academy of Nobles which Archbishop Merry del Val directs. This being lumped with a lot of young men who had not yet done a stroke of work for the Church was not exactly what I had hoped for; but it was better than nothing. Just as I was resigning myself to the semi-public audience, the Pope's major domo opened the door of the hall in which we were waiting, and said, in a clear loud tone: 'The Holy Father wants to see Father Lacombe.' I had him all to myself for seventeen minutes. Many Archbishops have had to leave Rome with nothing but a couple of minutes' interview; sometimes two or three Bishops together. I reminded the Pope that I had had the honor of a private audience twenty-one years ago, and I added that he had not changed a bit. When I insisted on his not having aged, he threw back his head and laughed outright. "Is he really much broken down?"

"When his head is bowed in silence he looks very old, but when he raises his head, looks you through with that piercing eye of his and speaks in resonant tones, especially when he appears in public, you forget that he is 91. I had the privilege of seeing him five times in public. Once in particular, at a great occasion in St. Peter's, when I was standing with a dense crowd of American visitors in one of the small galleries attached to the great pillars of the dome, his appearance, as he turned towards us and blessed us with outstretched hand, was so majestic and so winning that I heard a Protestant near me say, 'That's enough to make one a Catholic.'"

A STORY TOLD IN SCOTLAND.

The members of a large manufacturing firm in Glasgow, Scotland, are fond of telling a story which serves to illustrate Scotch pluck and perseverance. One day a little lad, both ragged and barefooted, presented himself before the head of the firm and said: "If you please, sir, I'm looking for a place to run errands." "Well, we have plenty of them to run," replied the gentleman; "but you cannot run them without a pair of shoes to run your feet." The boy shook his head and went away. He got a place to work in the public market and slept under one of the stalls. In about two months he had saved enough money to buy a pair of shoes, and one day Mr. Blank was confronted by a lad who carried a parcel. "I have the shoes, sir," he said. Mr. Blank had forgotten all about it.

"Seeing is Believing."

"When you see people cured by a remedy, you must believe in its power. Look around you. Friends, relatives, neighbors all say that Hood's Sarsaparilla, America's Greatest Medicine, cleansed the blood of their dear ones and they rise en masse to sing its praises. There's nothing like it in the world to purify the blood. Sores—"My health was poor and I had a sore on one of my limbs. My father thought I better try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I did so and the sores are now all better. Whenever I do not feel well I take Hood's." Elias Nettle vs. Lewis, Richmond, Quebec.

him. He thought a moment, then said: "Now I remember you. You want to run errands. Why, my boy, in those rags you would be a disgrace to us."

Away went the youngster without a word. At the end of six months he appeared again, wearing coarse garments which were evidently new. Mr. Blank began to be interested. He looked more closely at the little fellow, and saw by his pale, thin face that he had denied himself food in order to buy the clothes. But business was business.

"I'd take you, my boy," he said, "but we need a messenger who can read and write. I am afraid you can do neither." The boy shook his head sorrowfully and became a little paler. Again he turned away. He went into the country, found work in a stable near a night school, and in a year had learned to read and write very well. A third time he sought the great manufacturer.

"Now I can read and write, sir," he said simply. "I gave him the place," relates Mr. Blank; "and he is our chief foreman now, with so much stock in the business that he is likely to succeed me in time."—The Ave Maria.

THE BISHOP OF CLIFTON ON THE CHINESE MASSACRES.

It is perhaps impossible to say how far these massacres are owing to the Chinese hatred of the foreigner, or how far they are owing to the diabolical hatred of Christianity. Probably both motives combine, and act and react upon each other. Some native Christian is usually or unjustly treated. He naturally tells his grievance to his priest. The priest represents the injustice to the mandarin, who perhaps treats him with contempt, and punishes him for his interference. The priest goes to his Consul, who takes up the matter as an insult to the nation he represents. The case perhaps goes to the capital, and the Ambassador demands reparation, and the dismissal or censure of the local mandarin. If this is done, a resentful sense of foreign interference in native affairs is left in the minds of the mandarin and his friends, and his hatred of both foreigners and missionaries is intensified. Formerly the French, who persecuted the Church at home, claimed to be its protectors in China and other missionary countries. Much unnecessary odium was thus brought upon the Church; for it was said that the French missionary was only the pioneer of the French gunboat. It was to avoid the hindrance to missionary work that this idea ceased, that the Pope entered into direct relations with the Chinese Government, and obtained the concession that Catholic bishops should have the rank of mandarins, and thus be able, without having anything to do with the Consul, to protect native Christians in the local courts from unjust treatment. So far from increasing the dislike of the Chinese for the missionaries, this has done much to remove prejudice. It has, however, been represented in a contrary light in some English newspapers, probably through Protestant missionaries not having obtained the same concession. It seemed to us well to explain the true reason of the privilege, which was quite understood by the Chinese Government. In the interior of China, where there are none but Catholic missionaries, and there is no possibility of foreign interference, it is the diabolical hatred of the seed of the Serpent against the Seed of the Woman that causes attacks upon the Christians; and God alone knows the extent and fury of the persecution that our fellow Christians are passing through. We cannot forbear noticing how, among all the Rulers of Europe, the young Emperor of Germany is the only one that has taken the Christian standpoint, in his reply to the Emperor of China.

EVERY MOMENT PROPERLY USED.

People often make the excuse for not trying to improve themselves, by reading and study, that they cannot find time. We may not "find" time, but we can "make" time for the thing that really interests us. If Gladstone, with the weight of an empire on his mind, thought it necessary to make time for self-improvement, always carrying a book in his pocket lest an unexpected spare moment slip from his grasp, what should we common mortals not resort to to save the precious moments? The fact is, most people manage somehow, to make time for the thing which lies nearest their hearts, and there are very few of us who lead such busy lives that we cannot spend, systematically, at least a few minutes, half an hour, or an hour, out of twenty-four, for the mind's improvement. Even half an hour a day systematically and faithfully devoted to study will do wonders in a few years. Every young person should start out with a determination to invest just as much as possible in himself. This self-improvement is the best one can ever make, for no panic, bankruptcy or failure can destroy it. Every good book you read, every line of poetry you treasure up, every conscientious visit to an art gallery or museum you make, every glimpse of beauty, art, or nature you get, will add just so much to your personal value and will be worth more to you than silver or gold. Gladstone said: "Believe me when I tell you that thrift of time will pay you in after life with a usury of profit beyond your most sanguine dreams, and that waste of it will make you dwindle alike in intellectual and moral stature beyond your darkest reckoning." Scarcely anything else seems so positively wicked as waste of time. If you lose money you may be able to restore it; if you lose friends, you may get others, but lost time can never be restored.—Snooks.

Interesting Happenings The World Over.

An event so unusual as that which has just been celebrated at the little town of Faugemont, in Dutch Limburg, deserves a brief record. Two priests of the Diocese of Liege, the Revs. Hubert and Pierre Van den Boorn, twin brothers, commemorated the fiftieth anniversary of their ordination, and as both clergymen are extremely popular in their native town, the occurrence was made the occasion of a sympathetic demonstration. Faugemont was en fete for the day, work was suspended and all the schools closed to enable everybody to take part in the celebration. The houses were gaily decorated with flags and greenery, and in the principal streets triumphal arches were erected bearing appropriate inscriptions.

It is not generally known that the Holy Father personally revised the existing catalogue of the Index and expurgated therefrom the titles of no fewer than 3,000 works which had hitherto been condemned. In the course of time many books which under previously existing circumstances were justly considered dangerous reading become quite harmless, so that it would have been

The use of hypnotism in medicine has become so common that the careful editor of the American Eclectic Review deems it necessary to direct attention to the danger involved in all hypnotic experiments. Dr. Robert T. Morris, a New York expert, declares that the employment of hypnotism "requires more caution than the administering of chloroform or similar anesthetics. It has a tendency to weaken the subject's resistance to external impressions for a long time—it may be permanent; and the incautious hypnotizer may be the cause of a serious impairing of the will faculty." The Doctor has been led, by observing the results of suggestive therapeutics, to sound a public warning against this "dangerous resource," and a well-known medical journal of Philadelphia so far exceeds his warning as to say that hypnotic treatment is of "very little value to the medical practitioner, but it will always be a method of the charlatan and the impostor; hence its associations are neither agreeable nor beneficial." Suggestive therapeutics, it is well known, has been warmly commended by a few high authorities; but priests and people would do well to be cautious regarding a method which, on the testimony of experienced and conscientious practitioners, results in a "lot of more or less damaged brains."—Ave Maria.
