SUMMER'S FAREWELL. *

BY ELIZA COOK. What sound is that? 'Tis summer's farewell In the breath of the night winds sighing; The chill breeze comes. Ike a sorrowful dirge. That wails o'er the dead and the dying. The sapless leaves are eddying round. On the path where they lately shaded,—The oak of the forest is losing its robe. The flowers have failen and faded. All that I look on saddens my heart. To think that the lovely so soon should depart.

Yet why should I sigh? Other summers wil come,
Joys like the past one bringing;
Again will the vine bear its blushing fruit,
Again will the birds be singing;
The forest will put forth its "honours" again,
The rose be as sweet in its breathing,—
The woodbine will climb round the lattice pane,
As wild and as rich in its wreatfing.
The hives will have honey, the bees will hum,
Other flowers will spring, other summers will come.

They will, they will; but ah! who can tell
Whether I may live on till their coming?
This spirit may sleep too soundly then
To wake with the warbling or humming.
This check, now pale, may be paler far,
When the summer sun next is glowing,—
The cherishing ray may gild with the light
The grass on my grave-turf growing;
The earth may be glad, but the worms and

It is a great place, however, and a most important acquisition to our glorious "Old Thirteen."

There are about 250 vessels in harbour nany of them large ships, and mostly aban-loned and going to ruin. It is a most woful pity to look upon the shameful waste and ruin of so much valuable property. The owners and underwriters of New York and the other cities of the Union ought to petition the President for a man-of-war, whose pecial duty it should be to take care of the bandoned vessels, by taking down some of heir yards and spars, and mooring them safely, so as to prevent them going on shore, or dragging against each other.— Such is the position of these vessels, crow-ded together, that if the windward one were to catch fire, the whole fleet would be burn ed, without the possibility of saving any of them. It is an immense fleet, indeed, but still they come—their forests of masts reminding me of Shakspeare's forest of Birnam wood coming to Dunpinane. I advise you to let the merchants know this. * * B.
