The Will to Overcome

The Monument recently unveiled at Beaumont Hamel, the place where, seven years ago to-morrow, the Royal Newfoundland Regiment won imperishable fame, is surmounted by its emblem, the Caribou. In every line of its noble form as it stands gazing out over the field of battle is expressed defiance of danger, the spirit which carried the forefathers of the people of this country out into the unknown, which braced them against hardships, and enabled them to triumph over difficulties, to plant the Flag in new soil, there at first to eke out a precarious existence, and eventually to make for themselves comfortable homes and to establish permanently the foundation of Britain overseas.

The reputation won by the men who formed the Newfoundland contingents both on land and sea proved in an unmistakable manner that they had lost none of the sterling qualities bequeathed to them by their forefathers. Their prompt response to the call of the Mother Country shows that the fire of patriotism has never been allowed to burn low, and that the principles of right and liberty are as highly cherished by the present generation as they ever have been by the British race.

It was the privilege of, comparatively speaking, a few of the people of this country, and of all countries for that matter, to bear arms against the enemy; to others fell the responsibility of providing a continuous supply of the food and materials required by the forces, to submit to sacrifices, to undergo the strain of anxious waiting, and in many cases unfortunately to submit to the loss of a dear relative, or the sole support of the family having been taken, bravely to face the loneliness and uncertainty of the future.

All honour to those who met the enemy face to face and defied him with all his devilish cunning and elaborate designs to sweep them from his path! Unwavering they stood, even when warfare to them, fresh from their civil occupations, was a thing unknown. Their indomitable courage, their inherent spirit of defiance stood them in good stead, and in the end won for them a glorious victory.

All honour, too, to those who watched and waited, who toiled incessantly to keep the home fires burning and to supply the wants of the men in the firing line! Their devotion and courage, aye and their sacrifice, passed unrecorded, so exclusively was the attention of the world fixed upon the more stirring events occurring overseas. And when victory came they claimed no share in the victory, but were content in the knowledge that they had done all they could.

Looking back to those days, both those who fought and those who sturdily stood behind the forces recall the event with feelings of horror, and pray that such a calamity may never occur again. At the same time, there is something inspiring in such a review. Think of the wonderful qualities which it called forth, and the courage and endurance which it showed that the race possessed; think of the superhuman efforts that were made to supply from the resources of the Empire materials in quantities, which in peace time had never been imagined possible, and think, too, of the high moral effect of willingly offering our all to champion a rightful cause.

Is there not a tendency today to be unmindful of such matters, to rest on our oars at a time when a vigorous effort is required, to allow petty personal grievances, political differences, class distinctions, and industrial disputes to destroy that unity which the war fostered, and to render inoperative the wonderful force of energy which it produced? True, the British race is bearing a burden as a result of the struggle, which is almost overwhelming, but think you if the people as a whole were bent to-day upon solving the difficulties of reconstruction and re-establishment they would not as effectively be overcome as were such obstacles as the Hindenburg line?

Just Before Beaumont Hamel

(By BLUPUT.)

The village of Louvecourt, June 30th, 1918. It was the eve of the first real attack of The Newfoundland Regiment, for on the morrow we would all "go over" together. For about a month we had been rehearsing the attack and I think that each officer, N. C. O. and man knew exactly just what to do and what was expected of him. In the light of what happened in later attacks it strikes one now as nothing but tragic when you consider that besides our regular equipment we had to carry either a pick or shovel, a 20 foot ladder (between two men), two days' rations, and the poor bombers, an apron full of bombs. But, although we knew what we had to carry, there was not a man who did not think that he was going to "get there". In fact I think that a great number of the men had their pockets filled with chalk to mark the name of the Regiment on the German guns that we were going to capture.

The two raids that had been made on Fritz by Major Butler and his party did not seem to interest us much, although from the reception the raiding party received, we should have known that the part of the line opposite was going to be a hard nut to crack. (In fact Beaumont Hamel was not captured until December 1918, and then by twice the number of troops who were just now going to try.)

The afternoon was a busy one getting our surplus stores stowed away and passing in our packs which contained all our valuables. I remember well going the rounds of the different billets saying good-bye, but some of my chums could not be found—perhaps they felt as I did, it was too hard to say good-bye—but I'll bet they marched off smiling.

Railing for Sergeants' Memorial

An iron railing which will be placed around the Sergeants' Memorial at the foot of Garrison Hill, will arrive by Sackem which leaves Liverpool to-day. The railing is of a very neat design with rifle and bayonet gate.

Packing Turbot

Good work is being done by fishermen in Trinity Bay with the catching of turbot. This fish is being shipped in a pickled state to Canada where it commands a price of about $9.00 per barrel. The Department of Marine and Fisheries has recently promulgated new regulations governing the packing and shipping of this fish.

Found Drowned

A twenty-one year old resident of Greenspond, Edward Pond, was found drowned on Saturday morning at Oram's Cove, according to a message received yesterday afternoon by the Deputy Minister of Justice from Magistrate James, of Greenspond. The message reads as follows:—"Edward Pond, of Greenspond, aged 21, single, was missing from his home on Saturday. Search was made all over this island but found no trace of him. Sunday morning Constable Tucker went around the island in boat and found the body lying on the bottom at Oram's Cove. Deceased was mentally deficient."

THEY ONLY WIN

"They only the Victory win
 Who have fought the good fight, and have vanquished
 The demon that tempts us within;
 Who have held to their faith unswerving by the prize
 That the world holds on high;
 Who have dared for a high cause to suffer, resist,
 Fight,—if need be to die."

Vice-Regal Party Having Good Sport

Editor Evening Telegram
 Dear Sir.—On Saturday night the Vice Regal party fished at Biscay Bay and landed many sea trout; on Monday they visited Northwest Brook and were fortunate in landing several salmon. Lovely scenery and weather conditions. Miss Allardice landed the first three fish at the Falls Pool. His Excellency and Lady Allardice fished at Sandy Pool. His Excellency proposes to remain for another day's sport before proceeding to Ferryland. There is every prospect of a good day's fishing.

Home's Report

Capt. Norman of S.S. Home, which arrived at Humbermouth last night, reports to the Railway Management as follows:—"Made all ports of call to Battle Harbor going north, but had to pass Daniel's Harbor, Parson's Pond and Cow Head on the return trip owing to stormy weather and dense fog. Very good fishing on the Labrador side for trawls, but none for traps. Schooners in the vicinity of Blanc Sablon are trawling from 100 to 120 tubs of fish daily and at St. John's Island and Port-au-Choix, there is a very good sign for traps."

Fishing at Tompkins'

is reported good ever since the beginning of the season and a number of record fish have been landed. Visitors and campers have been loud in the praises of the wonderful "ARMADA" tea we sell. There is nothing so stimulating as a "mug-up" on the banks of the Pool after a couple of hours' fast sport landing the lovely salmon. Fresh stocks always on hand. J. F. TOMPKINS, Tompkins'.

Sociable at St. Andrew's Club Rooms

A very enjoyable sociable, under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Sergeants' Mess, was held last night at St. Andrew's Club Rooms. A large gathering was present. In a forty-five tournament, with which the affair began, Mrs. J. Rendell won the ladies prize and A. P. Cahill, the prize for gentlemen. Following cards, supper was served, after which dancing was indulged in to music supplied by Mr. Pushie. The proceeds will be devoted to the Sergeants' Mess Monument Fund.

A Female Burglar

On Tuesday night last a resident of LeMarchant Road, whose husband is out of town, left her home about 9 p.m. to go a short distance away. Before leaving she put out the electric lights and locking the door put the key in hiding. Returning shortly after 10 p.m. she found the front door open and the light in the hall on. Going to her bedroom she discovered a gent's umbrella, standing by a dressing table and what appeared to be a female in hiding underneath the bed. Becoming frightened she ran out of doors and called a neighbor to her assistance. Returning she found that the person under the bed had made a get-away. A gold watch missing from a dresser was discovered later in another part of the house. The police are investigating the case.

Another Shock

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., June 30. A violent earthquake struck the city at 12.30 o'clock this morning. This was the heaviest shake since the heavy tremor yesterday morning.

Without Friends

A pitiful case of an aged spinster named Hickey, who spent a number of years in the United States and returned here nearly two years ago on a visit to her brother, has been reported to the police. When she arrived here she was in fair circumstances but since all her savings had been spent paying board, and a few days ago, being unable to pay her bill, she was turned out of doors and the few articles of clothing which she possessed were held for the debt. Since then she has been sleeping in the woods as she cannot find anyone to give her shelter. In November, 1923, a short while after coming here, this old lady was run over by a team of horses and as a result spent some months in hospital with a fractured leg. Since her discharge all her savings has been spent in paying for lodgings.

Doesn't Like Work

Yesterday a 21 year old woman, residing near Pilot's Hill, complained to the police that her husband refuses to work, although employment has been provided for him. According to the wife he has taken the home furnishings and with several companions has settled down for the summer in a camp near the head of Kent's Pond. The wife is obliged to seek work.

Painting Up

The railway station is being painted by a staff of men from the railway car shops and presents a greatly improved appearance. It is near on twenty years since a coat of paint was given to the wooden portions of the exterior of the building. Hamilton and Patrick Streets appear to be in the van in the paint up movement and within a short while these streets will be amongst the most attractive in the city.

Fire on Vessel at Curling

The schooner Gladiolus of Buckport, Me., lying at Curling took fire there yesterday and would have been destroyed but for assistance rendered by E. S. Daisey. The fire started in the fore-cabin and was the result of a gasoline explosion. The Daisey had just arrived from Labrador when the fire broke out and hauling alongside the burning craft, a stream of water from the ship's hose was applied with good effect.

RHARD'S LINIMENT FOR CORNS AND BUNIONS.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

June 29th.—This the hottest day of the year, and do make me think it is indeed time that men should have lighter clothes to wear in the summer. Povey thinks that shorts and open-throated collars should be worn, but he was ever an extremist, yet I do think that it would be a good thing if men's suits could be obtained in lighter materials. Reading in a scientific book this day, I do learn something that I did not know before, being that ice cream placed in a copper kettle over a roaring fire will not melt if the kettle becomes heated to 400 degrees Fahrenheit. This indeed an interesting fact and I will know how to melt very hard ice cream in the future. Talking this day with Captain Winsor, that is Minister of Fisheries, he tells me how his Department now has divers men travelling about the fishing districts, and their business to obtain accurate statistics of the catch of fish which will be given to the Board of Trade at the end of each month. This a good thing, and the first time that it was ever done. High profited by the heat this night, I do remain at home and read in a most excellently written book which is called "Blind Rattery," to my great content.

Supreme Court

(Before Mr. Justice Kent)
 In the matter of the Nfld. Banking and Trust Corporation and the Reid-Newtonland Co., Ltd., Mines and Forests, Ltd., and the Newfoundland Power and Paper Co.
 Mr. Hunt for the defendants yesterday afternoon closed his address which had lasted seven hours. The evidence for the defence taken on commission in London and Montreal was then read.

This morning the examination of Mr. C. O'N. Conroy, General Counsel and Solicitor of the Reid firm and a director of their subsidiary companies, was examined by Howley, K.C.
 In referring to evidence given by plaintiff re the segregation and registration of the Reid assets, witness, when asked what his opinion was, said witness for plaintiff had confused two separate and distinct problems, and explained that the matter of segregation was brought by him to the attention of Mr. H. D. Reid in 1918, and that on May 31st, 1919 he gave Mr. Reid an opinion in writing on this subject. A copy of the letter was produced. Mr. Emerson for the plaintiffs objected. Argument on the point ended in the letter not being admitted as evidence. Up to recess hour Mr. Conroy's examination had not concluded.

Body of Child Recovered

The body of Chester Vincent, the five year old son of Mr. Harry Vincent, fisherman, at the Lower Battery, was recovered by the little fellow's brother from beneath the father's fishing stage shortly before 3 p.m. yesterday. The child was not missed from home until dinner hour and apparently had been playing around the stage and fell overboard. Dr. Donahue, who was called to examine the body, pronounced death due to drowning. In reporting the accident in yesterday's issue the name of the child was given as Benson. This was due to a misunderstanding of a 'phone message.
