

The Braes of Yarrow

An Historical Tale of the Sixteenth Century.

They found a cavern, the mouth of which was concealed by furze and heather. Within, the embers of a fire were still smouldering, proving that the place had been recently tenanted. This was corroborated by a pile of heather which had been used for a bed; and on the floor a kerchief, which was recognized by Eddie Craig as the same he had seen the witch wearing, proving that Kirly had been the tenant. She had evidently again attempted Tushielaw's movement and effected her escape from his pursuit.

A second time the mostroopers returned to the tower after a futile attempt to find the witch. Tushielaw, however, was satisfied that Kara had spoken truly, and observed his promise. He gave her a piece of gold bearing the English stamp, and bade her take up his quarters in the tower as long as she pleased.

So the Borderer supplied the first link in the chain of evidence against himself, and admitted the watchful eyes of a spy into his tower.

CHAPTER XLIV.—A GATHERING STORM. The new Lord of Birnam occupied an elegantly furnished suite of apartments on the second flat of a house in the Canongate, near the Netherbow Port. He had arrived there early in the morning, after quitting Tushielaw. By means of his private keys he had admitted himself without arousing any of his attendants, and hastily throwing off his courier's disguise, he locked it up in a strong chest, which was filled with every species of garment. Then he went to bed and slept for three hours.

At the end of that time he jumped up, dressed himself in his most becoming gear, and proceeded to the Castle. As he was crossing the court, he saw Captain Lindsay, Gilbert, and three companions just dismounting. Barras at once comprehended by whom his intended victim had been rescued.

"It was no accident which brought them to his help, curse them," he muttered with clenched teeth. "I will learn by whose instructions they made the journey, and if it be as I suspect, this mishap may turn to my advantage yet."

He saluted one of the Gentlemen of the Guard who was passing to the Constable's Tower. "Good morrow, Master Ogilvie; what expedition has called you forth so early?" "A frolic, a frolic, my lord," answered Ogilvie laughing, "and some rare sport in Strick Forest."

"So far a-gate? What quarry did you ride?" "A rescue, nothing more. We made first to Merlin's Cairn, where an old jehazel waited us and led us a midnight dance through the forest till we came upon a comrade who was sorely put to't for his life. We brought him off scathless, and left a few cracked crowns behind us."

"Who started the game?" "Aha, there lies the merit of it all—but in your ear it was a fair friend of our captain's." Barras nodded his head, and looked wondrous wise.

"My hand upon it, Master Ogilvie, but I will discover the dame at one guess." "Say it then." Barras whispered, nodded, and the guardsman, laughing, went on his way. The schemer's face darkened as, with hands clasped behind his back and bowed, he slowly crossed the court.

"It was as I thought," he muttered; "but how came she to know that he was in peril? Does she suspect me, and did she see me quit the castle? Or did her knowledge spring from tender anxiety for his safety? Hum—that must be it. We shall see how my Lord of Angus, the husband of a Queen, will take this amour of his sister for a nameless adventurer."

All the venom of his nature was imparted to the sneering bitterness with which he pronounced the words. He sought an immediate interview with Angus, and his lordship readily granted the request of who appeared to serve him with so much fidelity.

The Ottawa papers record the death of Mrs. Cameron, wife of the Hon. Malcolm Cameron, Queen's Printer. Mrs. Cameron had long been an invalid, but when in health was an ornament of the society in which she moved.

An Australian paper says: "Horses are selling in Gipp's Land at tenpence apiece, or seven for five shillings. It is lucky for the horses that sheep can be bought very nearly at the same rate, else would hippophagy soon become an institution with us."

CHILD DESERTION.—An infant, about four weeks old was found some days ago lying on the grass a short distance north of Toronto. The manner in which it was placed left no doubt but that it had been left there by some natural mother whose feelings of shame were to be stifled by the commission of an enormity at which savages would shudder. The unnatural mother has not yet been found.

THE POPE A FREEMASON.—The Sicile says: "Who would have suspected it? The Pope is a Freemason! Impossible! It will be said; but he really is. In the register of a Sicilian lodge, the minute of his initiation has been discovered; and behold the fraternity, in order to avenge itself for the excommunication pronounced against it, publishes a document accompanied by a photograph representing the successor of the apostle wearing the masonic emblems!"
