WAR-MADE DUKES.

Who Will Get Highest Title of Nobility Out of the Conflict.

Will the greatest war in history produce a British dukedom? It will be curious if that is not one of its minor results, because many of our noble families of the highest rank owe their distinction to the prowess of warrior ancestors, Marlborough and Wellington are instances which will occur to everyone, but there are others. The first Duke of Norfolk, who died on Bosworth Field leading the van of Richard's army, had many years before became Captain-General of all the King's Forces at sea for resisting the attempts of Lancastrians, and was perhaps the best "sailor and soldier too" of his time.

The Dukedom of Somerset also had its course in a first-class fighting man, who led an army of invasion into Scotland in 1544, and after defeating the French a year later became Captain-General of Boulogne and Lieut.-General of the Army in France. His was probably the quickest elevation ever recorded, for from a simple knight he became Baron Seymour one day and Duke of Somerset the next. The first Duke of Manchester was perhaps more distinguished as a diplomatist than a soldier, yet, espousing the cause of the Prince of Orange, he took an active part in the campaign in Ireland and was present at the battle of the Boyne, thus carving with his sword the way to the highest honor of the peerage.

Remarkable Snuff-Box.

Mauchline, in Scotland, is the proud possessor of a remarkable snuff-box. It is shaped like a book. The boards are composed of small squares of wood with the most interesting histories. On one side there is "oak from a canoe found in the Doon, 1831"; "oak from Glasgow Cathedral"; "from Highland Mary's thorn"; "oak from the piles of London Bridge, built 1176"; "oak of the Royal George, sunk at Spithead, 29th August, 1789"; "oak from Elderstie"; "Queen Mary's yew"; "oak of House of Lords, built October, 1834"; "oak of H.M. ship, sunk 1545 near 1849"; "cedar of Lebanon"; "oak from H.M.S. Boyne." The other side of the box consists of interesting relics. "oak of St. George's, Bass Rock, 1670"; "oak of Tower of London, built 1077"; "oak of Royal Exchange, burnt January, 1839"; "oak of ship Temeraire, broken up 1839"; "oak of Knox's pulpit"; "Peden's thorn, from burying ground, Cumnock"; "oak of Alloway Kirk"; "oak of Lord Nelson's flagship Victory"; "Ehu from field of Waterloo"; "oak of Holyrood Palace"; "oak of ship which brought over King William III., 1688." There are thus eleven relic pieces of wood on each side of the box.

A Teetotal Story.

Those who intend to follow the King's example and to become teetotalers during the war will find themselves in very distinguished company, for many famous men never touch intoxicating liquor of any kind. One of the most notable of these is Lord Charles Beresford, apropos of which fact there is an amusing story.

Speaking to an audience of sailors some time ago, Lord Charles said: "I advise you to go in for sport instead of hard drinking. In my maturer years I have become a teetotaler myself."

A short time afterwards, he received a letter from a dear old lady, who was absolutely unknown to him, in which she said that she had read the report of his speech in the paper and ended up with: "How thankful I am that, as a public man, you have given up the dreadful vice of intoxication!"

He Shed the Clothes.

A young Scotchman who was sent out to Canada some years ago with letters of introduction from various titled friends to the directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway was referred to Baron Shaughnessy, then general manager of the C. P. R. Wishing to make an impression, he put on frock coat and tall hat, and was indeed astonished to find the general manager working in his shirt-sleeves. However, he had good engineer's certificates and so was given a job. But before he left the room, "Young man," said Lord Shaughnessy, "if you mean to keep your job on the C. P. R. you'll have to shed those clothes." The young Scotchman was Randolph Bruce, now one of the best known men in the West.

Where They Were Shot.

Among the visitors to the Tower of London were two ladies whose sense of the realistic was more pronounced than a love of the historic. It mattered not to them that the passing centuries had endowed with an historic significance the various objects that claimed their attention. They passed from room to room with dwindling interest and curiosity. Presently they halted in consultation. Then one lady detached herself from her companion and sought the help of a beefeater. "Can you tell us," she asked with suave seriousness, "where the spies are shot?" The official, who had within him the instinct of censorship, replied, "In the chest, madam," and walked on.
