

"BEST MEDICINE FOR WOMEN"

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did For Ohio Woman.

Portsmouth, Ohio.—"I suffered from irregularities, pains in my side and was so weak at times I could hardly get around to do my work, and as I had four in my family and three boarders it made it very hard for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me. I took it and it has restored my health. It is certainly the best medicine for woman's ailments I ever saw."—Mrs. SARA SHAW, R. No. 1, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Mrs. Shaw proved the merit of this medicine and wrote this letter in order that other suffering women may find relief as she did.

Women who are suffering as she was should not drag along from day to day without giving this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial. For special advice in regard to such ailments write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its forty years experience is at your service.

Going to School in Cellars

The children of France are going to school in champagne cellars these days, where the sunshine never pierces through, ventilation is largely imaginary, and the noise of the guns booms down to punctuate the spelling of o-h-a-t, cat. But that is the war zone, and war is the best reason in the world for leaving big modern schools buildings to descend to cellars and dugouts in the ground; for even little children must endure bad air and artificial light when bombs and shells are alternative.

Onions a Disinfectant

Much has been said about the virtues of the onion, but few know of its use as a disinfectant.
An onion cut in half and set in a room will attract to itself all manner of germs, leaving the air sweet and pure; it is therefore most valuable in cases of sickness. Care, however, must be taken to burn the onion afterward.
No part of an onion should ever be used for domestic purposes after having been allowed to lie about overnight. The eating of raw onions is a great personal protective in time of epidemic, and if taken with cucumbers the breath is left innocent of any objectionable odor.

Catarh Cannot be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions, and in order to cure it you must take an internal remedy. Hall's Catarh Medicine is taken internally and acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. Hall's Catarh Medicine was prescribed by one of the best physicians in the country for years. It is composed of some of the best tonics known, combined with some of the best blood purifiers. The perfect combination of the ingredients in Hall's Catarh Cure is what produces such wonderful results in catarhal conditions. Send for testimonials, free. F. J. CHENNY & CO., Props., Toledo, O. How Viennese View Life

IT neither begins too early nor ends too late. The good-natured Viennese is not exacting toward it, as is the Berliner, nor is he altogether the slave of it, as a Bolo would disdainfully say of here. It moves so pleasantly and smoothly and ordered for him, it is dealt out in such generous comforting measure that he might well be tempted to demand, like the Queen of the May, an early call to greet it and an extra indulgence after normal bedtime to enjoy its remaining sweets. But there is, in Vienna, a very real deterrent to late hours which exists in no other capital city, the house janitor and his inevitable "door fee." The big portals of the flats may not be opened at will by the tenants privileged, as in Berlin, with a key, nor by the mere pulling of a bell which, in Paris, is popularly supposed to be attached to the drowsy concierge's anatomy. No, the bell must be rung, that the waiting janitor may throw open the door in person, and the money tribute paid in kreuzers by each one of the belated arrivals.

The early morning streets are almost certain to be in the throes of their matutinal cleaning as one steps into them. Vienna does not design its abutions upon exactly modern lines. As likely as not a man will be vigorously swinging the nozzle of a hose attached to the rear of a water cart and sprinkling the cobblestones, while a row of men armed with brooms essays to keep pace with him. Slovak women in topboots and white headcloths climb up the ladders of scaffolding carrying hods of bricks. The shops appear to be still yawning, but the cafe has already begun the Vienna day. Its tables and chairs, spread over the pavement, form an admirable vantage ground from which to observe the half-awakened life. Here the real Viennese takes his breakfast, and he has no sooner taken his seat than the geni of the morning papers, the "Zeitungskeilner," slide up to him with a sheaf of the dailies attached to convenient cane frames with handles.

Somewhere about noon is the hour for the advent of that feature of Vienna, the two-horse fiacre driver. It is of no avail to protest that one has "done" or knows Vienna without having made the fiacre's acquaintance. One might as well say that one had seen Vienna and not clapped eyes upon the "poppe" or gondola. So it comes that one may have gazed upon the famous old stump, the "Stockim-Eisen" studded with the nails driven in by the journeymen of medieval Vienna; have "done" the museums, the palaces, the statues and monuments, the Prater, and the Opera; have climbed the Kahlenberg or the Leopoldsdorf and drunk in the impressive view of mountains, city, and the Danube; have fed the bears at Schonbrunn, and walked the favorite paths of emperors and empresses in the gardens; have enjoyed the lovely pleasure grounds of the ravine of Bruchl; have witnessed an impressive "washing-of-the-feet" ceremony by the Emperor at the palace, or the procession of Corpus Christi trailing its slow way through the Graben, and yet have missed the one feature for which Vienna lives and moves and has her being—the fiacre! He refuses to change, no matter what changes. No one can whistle like him, nor drive just like him, nor look so "fresh," nor be so witty, nor have such a smart two-horse turn-out, nor talk the soft Vienna dialect as he does. His horses seem to "shoot" like a bullet out of a gun, to stop within a hair's breadth at his command, and to dart forward again with a reckless daring that holds the spectator breathless with admiration.

The Ringstrasse is the favorite haunt of the fiacre. And what an unrivaled panorama it is that swiftly passes before the eyes of his "fare." Here Vienna has crowded all its eggs into one basket, and here at carnival time, or "Fasching," the very quintessence of Viennese life collects. No wonder Vienna has won the name of the beautiful, the magnificent city. It has reared its monumental buildings where they have the most artistic value, in the traditional style of Vienna baroque, with its open-air embellishment in relief and color, and its sense of lightness and gaiety. Palace, museum, church, and administrative building alternate, heedless of the shabbiness and the out-of-date not a stone's throw away. Here Vienna has arrayed herself in her best, has shown her gracious smile, and has transcribed something of the music which sings within the heart of her lightsome, genial people. The Volksgarten, hard by the palace and the city's magnificent playhouse, seems to typify all that makes up the essence of this airy, spacious Vienna life. The "garden of the people" contains none of the tragedy but all the comedy of it. The statue of Grillparzer, the favorite playwright, shares with the former bandstand of Strauss the devotion of the people. As the smart fiacre draws up by the gates, there come to one's ears the dreamy lilt, the catchy sycophancy of those waltzes which ever since the avaricious, or tried regard

One sat in the early Scandinavian days, have typified the heart of the inimitable, unduplicated "Wiener." Here Vienna is the city of music for music's sake, for the enjoyment of it and the dropping of the burden. The morrow may have its cares, but the present day has always its joys. That is Vienna, and the precious gift of the lightsome, quasi superficial Viennese.—Christian Science Monitor.

OLDEST DYNASTY IN WORLD

Distinction Undoubtedly Belongs to the Reigning House of Japan—Eagan With Emperor Jimmu.

The present Japanese dynasty is by far the oldest in the world, for Yoshitomo claims to be the one hundred twenty-second monarch of an unbroken line, dating from the seventh century before the Christian era, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The early history of Shinto, as recorded in the holy book, Shinto, begins with the dynasties of the gods and is wholly mythical in nature. The dawn of real history begins with the reign of Jimmu Tenno, whose memory is revered today by all the sons of Nippon.

Jimmu the Great forced the savage tribes to accept civil institutions and extended his beneficent sway over the entire country. He established his capital at Kioto. He formulated a code of laws, established courts, encouraged industry, and laid the foundation for that marvelous advance made by the Japanese during the nineteenth century.

JUST WHAT BECAME OF POND

Foolish Questioner, It is to Be Supposed, Was Satisfied With Explanation Offered Him.

Speaking at a dinner, Senator J. Hamilton Lewis of Illinois referred to the propensity of some people for asking foolish questions, and told the following story:

One day a city man happened in a country community, and while rambling around he ran across a depression in the earth covering several acres. Some perplexed, he questioned a native close by, and was told that it was the bed of a lost lake.

"You don't really mean it?" returned the city man. "Whatever became of all the water?"

"It was this way," readily explained the native. "There was a picnic out here last August, and when night came on they had nearly a barrel of pretzels left, which they didn't want to cart back home, so they threw them in the lake."

"Yes, I see," interjected the other as the native paused, "but what had that to do with it?"

"Everything," answered the native. "The fish ate them, and the salty diet made them so thirsty that they drank all the water."

DUST CAUSES ASTHMA.—Even a little speck too small to see will lead to agonies which no words can describe. The walls of the breathing tubes contract and it seems as if the very life must pass. From this condition Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy brings the user to perfect rest and health. It relieves the passages and normal breathing is firmly established again. Hundreds of testimonials received annually prove its effectiveness.

A detachable wire prevents a new square paper drinking cup collapsing.

On the shank of a new fish hook are prongs to hold live bait with a minimum of injury.

The Utah inventor of a steering wheel for vehicles with which horses can be guided and controlled claims it will handle animals satisfactorily under all conditions.

Argentine naturalists are trying to decide whether the wild horses of that country are descendants of horses imported by Spanish conquerors or of prehistoric origin.

It is said that moth balls put in the runs made by moles will drive them away.

All glass bottles in the house should be saved to hold preservers or dried foods.

THEY CLEANSE WHILE THEY CURE.—The vegetable compounds of which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are composed mainly dandelion and mandrake, clear the stomach and intestines of deleterious matter and restore the deranged organs to health action. Hence they are the best remedy for indigestion available today. A trail of them will establish the truth of this assertion and do more to convince the sifting than anything that they grow more popular daily.
